SENATE MOVES TO GIVE POWER DISPUTE WITH PRESIDENT TO COURTS

Votes, 45-32, to Return Nominations to Committee.

WALSH OFFERS BILL TO START LEGAL TEST

Norris Predicts Approval in Committee; Useless Action, Says Watson.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate moved yesterday to carry to the courts its battle with President Hoover over three members of the Power Commission by voting, 45 to 32, to send the nominations back to its interstate commerce committee.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, leader of the fight to remove the commissioners, immediately introduced a resolution to direct District Attorney Rover to bring legal proceedings to test the President's right to retain them.

Chairman Norris, of the judiciary committee, to which the resolution was referred, said it would be considered Monday and predicted its approval. Mr. Norris expressed confidence that the issue, without precedent in American history, will now be settled in the courts.

Mitchell Reveals Opinion.

The conflict was precipitated by President Hoover's refusal to return to the Senate notification of the confirmation of Chairman Smith and Commissioners Garsaud and Draper, after the Senate had reconsidered confirmation.

The President said the Senate was attempting an invasion of his executive authority.

Shortly after the Senate's action yesterday, Attorney General Mitchell made public his advisory opinion on which Mr. Hoover based his refusal to comply with the Senate's demands.

The Attorney General informed the President his return of the papers to the Senate "would serve no lawful purpose, because no action which the Senate could not take would disturb or operate to revoke the appointments."

Charges Renewed.

Senate debate on the recommittal motion brought a renewal of charges that the power commission had dismissed its solicitor, Charles A. Russell, and its accountant, William V. King, because of their fight against fictitious valuation claims of the power companies.

The charge was made and denied that the dismissal of the two employes and the employment in the Interior Department of Frank E. Bonner, executive secretary, who also was dismissed, indicated the administration was "friendly to the power interests."

Walsh and other leaders of the recall movement have based their case on the charge that the three new power commissioners dismissed Russell and King for "doing their duty."

Vote on Recommittal.

Fifteen Republicans voted yesterday for the Walsh recommittal motion, and four Democrats opposed it. The line-up was the same as on the vote to recall the nominations.

The Republicans who voted for it were:

Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Cutting, Frazier, Hatfield, Howell, Johnson, Jones, LaFollette, McMaster, Norbeck, Norris, Nye and Pine.

Democrats opposing it were:

Brock, Brussard, Kendrick and Stephens.

The Montana senator said Russell and King had uncovered fictitious valuations of power companies amounting to $100,000,000.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) Montana, said the only conclusion which would be drawn from the dismissal of Russell and King, and the employment of Bonner in the Interior Department, was that the administration supported Bonner's views "favoring the power companies."

Chairman Couzens said there was no basis for such conclusions.

Daisy De Boe Is Guilty Of Theft From Star

Jurors Request Mercy for Former Secretary to Clara Bow.

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—A verdict convicting Daisy De Boe of stealing from the bank account of Clara Bow during the eighteen months she lived with the "It" girl of the screen was returned at 3:42 p. m. today by a jury of seven men and five women.

The verdict was written on only one of the 35 counts of grand theft charged to the former secretary of the red-headed film actress. This was count number seven, involving a check for $825 written on October 29, 1930, two days before Miss De Boe was discharged from the position. It was issued for the purchase of a fur coat.

She was acquitted on all other counts of the indictment.

The jury announced it recommended clemency in the passing of sentence on the 26-year-old woman. The penalty for her offense may be one to ten years in prison, or she may be granted probation, or she may, with a possible provision, serve part of probationary term in the county jail.

The verdict stunned Miss De Boe. She burst into tears and collapsed on the counsel table at which she had

GRAND JURORS SCAN SMITH CASE PAPERS

3 WITNESSES ARE HEARD

The grand jury will continue, and most probably conclude its investigation today into the alleged "spurious writings" introduced in defense of G. Bryan Pitts and two other former officials of the F. H. Smith Co. at the recent $5,000,000 conspiracy-embezzlement trial.

Sensational charges against Pitts and several others associated in his defense were presented to the inquisitorial body yesterday in an attempt to secure an additional indictment against the deposed financier.

The names of "these associates" were carefully guarded by Department of Justice prosecutors and agents handling the case. Speculation was rife in the courthouse corridors as to who and how many are involved in the case as the witnesses filed in and out of the grand jury room.

Cognizance of the seriousness of the offenses charged to Pitts and these others was taken by Attorney General William Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell, in an official document filed in the clerk's office several minutes before the grand jury probe got under way, appointed Nugent Dodds as special assistant to him and authorized him to prosecute civil and criminal action against Pitts and the "certain associates."

Mr. Dodds supervised the prosecution of the three Smith Co. officers at the conspiracy trial.

The Attorney General's commission reveals the specific charges on which the Government is attempting to have the grand jury take action.

Pitts and his certain associates are accused in the commission of offering in evidence certain false requisitions and receipts justifying his taking of money the Government said was embezzled.

Four sections of the District and Federal codes were violated, the com-

CARTER COLLAPSES AT BINDING MEETING

Public Printer Is Stricken With Acute Indigestion; Better Last Night.

BANQUET IS ABANDONED

George H. Carter, United States Public Printer, collapsed late yesterday afternoon at an executive committee meeting of the Employing Bookbinders of America at the Hotel Carlton. He was reported to have been stricken with acute indigestion.

According to those present at the meeting, Mr. Carter slumped over in his chair, and fell to the floor in a dead faint. His collapse occurred at 5 o'clock, shortly after he had addressed the bookbinders.

Attendants at the hotel rendered first aid, and Mr. Carter revived sufficiently to give the name of his physician, Dr. D. P. Bush, who was immediately summoned. The public printed was taken to his home by Dr. Bush after being given further treatment at the hotel.

Dr. Bush could not be reached at a late hour last night, but Mrs. Carter informed The Post that the condition of her husband was much improved. She stated that he was attacked with acute indigestion.

The collapse of the public printer was not made public lest it create alarm at the Government Printing Office.

Due to the Public Printer's illness, the meeting, which should have continued today, was brought to a close last night. A gala banquet had been planned for last night, but the absence of the Public Printer, who was to have been the guest of honor, threw a damper on the proceedings.

A handful of the bookbinders made valiant efforts to fan the interrupted meeting back into life by holding an impromptu banquet of their own, which was supplemented by lively piano music.

George A. Simonds, committeeman from the Fourth District, in which Washington is incorporated, reported that the prospects for the book business during the coming year are exceedingly bright. The next meeting of the executive committee will be held in Buffalo, N. Y., in May, it was announced.

PARLEY TO CUT ARMS SET FOR NEXT JANUARY

League Council Agrees to Time, but Fails on Chairman.

SITE OF CONFERENCE ALSO IS UNCERTAIN

Ambassador DawesBoombed to Preside at Meeting; Decision in May.

Geneva, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—The nations of the world will gather once more, in the last week of January, 1932, in a general conference for reduction of arms on land, on the sea and in the air.

The council of the League of Nations set that time for a general disarmament conference tonight after four days of debate during which the German demand for a meeting in November of this year was overruled.

No Decision on Chairman.

No decision was reached as to the man who will be chairman. During the public and private meetings of the council the name of Dr. Edward Benes, the Czechoslovakian, has been proposed, but the Germans objected to him and there was a suggestion, so far purely informal, that Ambassador Charles Dawes be asked to accept the job.

The British and the French held out for a conference next year instead of some time later this year and the majority of the other delegates held to the opinion that at least twelve months would be necessary to prepare for a successful conference.

The council did not decide definitely where the conference would be held, but Arthur Henderson, the British foreign minister, said it probably would be at Geneva. This and the selection of a chairman will be decided next May when the league council meets again.

Preparation Is Big Job.

The task of preparing for the conference is still a formidable job, even after the past decade of activity paving the way for it. A draft disarmament convention has been prepared, but this is only an outline and the most difficult part is to fill in the actual figures.

The inability to agree now on a chairman came as a disappointment in some quarters because it is felt that the conference head and his assistants ought to get started as soon as possible on an outline for the meeting and on agreements by the several governments as to figures on their defense requirements.

2 Children Perish As Home Burns

Mother Seared as She Rescues One of Three in Dwelling.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Jan. 23.—Martha Brechbill, 13, and her brother Richard, 10, were burned to death in the destruction of a two-apartment dwelling at Mount Alto this morning. Their bodies were taken from the ruins several hours later. The children's mother and a third child were severely burned.

The mother discovered the fire in the kitchen, rushed back and picked up the smallest child and called to the other two. Why they did not follow the mother is not known. John Sprow, who with his family occupied the first floor, carried the mother and child down a rear porch steps to safety.

GANDHI TO GAIN LIBERTY TODAY, INDIA BELIEVES

Viceroy Studies Plan to Free Leader of Nationalists.

EARLY ACTION LIKELY ON GENERAL AMNESTY

50,000 Political Prisoners to Be Released if Order Is Restored.

New Delhi, India, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Before another 24 hours have passed Mahatma Gandhi, imprisoned leader of the Indian Nationalists, probably will be a free man, it was predicted here today.

The end of his eight months' imprisonment appeared to be delayed only by a question as to what other leaders of the Congress party should be given their freedom with him. The viceroy and his council were discussing this matter today, but it was believed they already had decided to restore Gandhi's freedom.

His liberation and that of his associates is bound up with the issue of general amnesty for all India's 50,000 or more political prisoners.

Amnesty Expected Soon.

At the close of the round table conference in London Ramsay MacDonald said amnesty would be granted if order could be restored in India.

There appeared to be an excellent prospect that such general amnesty would be proclaimed soon.

The viceroy has received appeals from all parts of India urging that political prisoners be released, not only to give the Congress party leaders an opportunity for free discussion of the prime minister's Indian policy, but also as a means of inaugurating an era of better feeling throughout the country and paving the way for internal peace.

Crowds Present Problem.

One of the problems involved in freeing Gandhi is how to avoid the manifestations of the crowds which would be sure to greet him.

It is certain that no matter where the government releases Gandhi, after restoring his freedom, his followers will gather by the hundreds of thousands, eager to see him and to touch his garment.

Gandhi was arrested last May, a month after he had led a group of Nationalist volunteers from Allahabad to the sea at Dandhi, where they made salt in defiance of British law.

Temblor Cracks Mexican Buildings

No Lives Reported Lost as Strong Tremor Shakes Several States.

Mexico City, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Reports reaching Mexico City tonight said a strong earth tremor was felt in several Mexican states late last night, terrorizing the inhabitants of a number of cities.

Coming on the heels of the quake in Oaxaca January 14, which took a total of 114 lives and destroyed several towns, last night's tremor caused widespread panic and in some places the people spent the rest of the night in the open.

Last night's tremor cracked many buildings in Huastuco and the inhabitants spent the night in the plazas and other open spaces. The movement was strong at Salina Cruz, and also was felt in Oaxaca and Manzanillo. In Mexico City it was felt only slightly.

HOWELL RUM RAID BILL GIVEN RIGHT OF WAY IN SENATE BY 39-29 VOTE

FRIENDS THINK STAND BEING MISCONSTRUED

Seek to Mollify Outburst of Wets Over Message Sent With Law Report.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Although certain friends of the President continued to work assiduously yesterday trying to mollify the wet outburst against the President's message accompanying the Wickersham report, it was made apparent that the President himself is content to let the dry interpretation placed upon it to rest, for the time being at least.

Among those who insisted that he had been misunderstood there was also the assurance, or rather, the serious belief, that he would later on make some amplifying utterances, but certainly nothing like that was in sight. No inkling of any such utterance was forthcoming at yesterday's press conference.

Unquestionably, it was agreed on all sides, when it comes to arguing the exact language of his message, he did leave the door open to acceptance of some sort of change in the eighteenth amendment later, but in political circles, where they look hastily at things in bulk and not at a word here and there, it was agreed that in the fever heat of the wet and dry controversy, Mr. Hoover will be satalogued definitely as a dry.

Door Already Slammed.

As one prominent Republican senator expressed it, he may have left the door open, but not more than by a crack and it has already been slammed after him. This particular Republican, incidentally, although a west, looks for the Republicans taking the dry side in 1932.

There was nothing definite to show, in fact, that the President was personally concerned in the outcome of the efforts of some of his friends to "undry" him, and for this reason there is ground for the belief that their subject is not to leave Mr. Hoover on the fence or to try to sell him to both sides in 1932, but simply not to let the controversy rent the party at this time.

The attitude of Senator Fess, of Ohio, lends weight to this belief. The Ohio senator is an uncompromising dry. And just after the November elections he said publicly that the Republican party had better remain dry in 1932. Aside from being a dry at heart the Ohio senator's knowledge of practical politics tells him that the frenzied dry camp is the greatest haven in the country for a politician in distress and there seems to be a unanimity of opinion that the Republican party is in distress now.

Wets After His Scalp.

Senator Fess took a lot of political browbeating for his utterance, too. The wets jumped all over him and some demanded that he resign as chairman of the Republican national committee.

Now, having taken his position out in front, to have racks thrown at him as he did, one would think he would be delighted at Mr. Hoover's apparent coming up to join him. Instead, the hio senator was the first to spring the idea that the President's utterance had been misrepresented. And he has been the most assiduous at trying to put the President in the right light.

It can't be, simply can't be, that Senator Fess is grabbing at the crack in the door which Mr. Hoover left as a possibility that he will not be dry after all. It would probably break the senator's political heart if he were anything else.

The deduction is that Senator Fess, from his own experience, thinks that

SERIOUSLY ILL

COL. AMOS WOODCOCK.

WOODCOCK FORCED TO BED BY ILLNESS

CONDITION HELD SERIOUS

Binghamton, N. Y., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, national prohibition director, was taken ill, after arriving here today to investigate prohibition enforcement in this area and the alleged bootlegging activities of Andrew J. Horvatt. Horvatt, president of the closed State Bank of Binghamton, disappeared about a month ago. Shortages amounting to more than $1,500,000 have thus far been uncovered at Horvatt's bank.

Dr. Andrew S. Fritts described Col. Woodcock as seriously ill," with a temperature of 102 degrees. He said he had not determined definitely the nature of the illness, but it appeared some sort of a grippe infection. He said he had ordered the prohibition director to bed, and Col. Woodcock must deny himself to all callers.

Col. Woodcock's visit came after statements by Mrs. Mary Carter, president of the Broome County W. C. T. U., that "the largest bootlegging establishment in up-State New York had operated unmolested here for years," and that Lowell R. Smith, deputy prohibition administrator in the Syracuse district, was "unsatisfactory as a prohibition enforcement officer." She said Smith had suspended "the only officer who ever raided the establishment successfully," apparently referring to Charles W. Kress, an investigator.

Federal Judge Frank Cooper was one of those who responded to this declaration by coming to Smith's defense and asserting he was one of the best men in the service.

A grand jury inquiry of alleged police department activity or inactivity in connection with Horvatt's disappearance is under way.

Against the advice of his physician, who said it was dangerous, Col. Woodcock announced he would return to Washington at midnight tonight. He said he would continue his personal investigation into prohibition enforcement in this area and alleged Horvatt bootlegging business on his recovery.

Girl, 13, Kills Herself After Being Disciplined

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Thirteen-year-old Helen Louise Shipman was punished today for talking back to her parents.

Later a shot was heard. The girl was found shot to death. A revolver lay near her body.

POLICE, U. S. AGENTS GET WIDER POWERS

Proposal Is Conceded Little Chance to Pass; Viewed as Battleground.

The Senate by a vote of 39 to 29, yesterday made the Howell home-raid prohibition enforcement bill for the National Capital its unfinished business and thereby opened the way for a prohibition battle of national importance.

The measure, introduced by Senator Robert B. Howell (Republican), of Nebraska, contains drastic provisions against liquor in the District and gives police and prohibition agents unusually broad authority to enter private homes on suspicion that liquor might be found.

Although applying directly only to Washington, the bill has become of much greater importance to both wets and drys and each group is determined to make it an issue.

Vote Not Real Test.

The vote was one of the closest had lately on a wet and dry issue, but there were other things involved and it was not a flat test of strength between the advocates of prohibition and those who oppose it.

Seventeen Republicans voted for the motion and 21 Republicans voted against it; 22 Democrats voted for and 8 voted against.

There were wets and drys to be found on both sides, although for the most part they divided along expected lines. Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, a dry, voted against, while Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, voted to bring the Howell measure up.

Little Chance of Passage.

The measure has not much chance of becoming a law, certainly at this session, but it will serve as a battleground, and that is what it will be was shown by the response to Senator Howell's motion to make his measure the unfinished business, a program, incidentally, which previously had been given the approval of the Republican steering committee, although Senator James Watson, of Indiana; Republican leader, voted against Mr. Howell's motion when the test came yesterday.

The Howell measure had been selected as a good one to make the unfinished business because it could always be counted o nto start a flow of oratory between consideration of appropriation bills and thus serve to stave off other legislation. The furor raised by the Wickersham report helped center attention on the measure, and resulting debate may give the bill an important part in the maneuverings for and against an extra session.

Senator Borah, who is proud of his dryness, voted against taking the bill up because he said this was no time to waste on such inconsequential legislation while matters of national import were demanding attention.

Bingham Plans Amendment.

Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, announced he would propose to amend the Howell bill by adding to it his measure legalizing 4 per cent beer. This would bring to issue the light wines and beer scheme.

Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, asked Senator Howell if he would agree to amend his bill so as to provide the penalty of death for violations of the liquor law. Mr. Howell, however, refused to agree. The Marylander then asked the Nebraskan to agree to a referendum on the measure in Washington.

Washington newspapers are wet and they probably would influence the result, Senator Howell said, and refused that proposal, too, whereupon Senator Tydings dclared he

Calvin Coolidge

Says: Periodically we are asked to consider what to do about the organized efforts of those hostile to our form of government and system of society. We have about all the law necessary, under the established inherent right of the people to determine their own institutions. Overt acts of hostility are rightly punishable as crimes.

This is a free country, the people have a right to discuss openly changes in government to be made constitutionally. That does not include conspiracy to use force.

The only effective remedy that can ultimately succeed is education. Argument must answer argument. Our people reject the theory that the bread they earn should be eaten by others. They wish to determine who shall eat it. The number unwilling to be convinced that our institutions are sound, that freedom prevails, and that economic conditions are humanly fair is strikingly small. Right thinking people should be alert, and somewhat organized to meet distortions of facts and illogical arguments. But our institutions are never in so much danger from those who are openly trying to destroy them as from the misguided actions of those who think they are society.

Costly Cardboard Models, Delayed, Are Now Useless

Maj. John C. Gotwals, District Engineer Commissioner, will have nothing more to do with cardboard models in persuading the Budget Bureau and the Senate and House District committees that they should approve District projects.

Two models, costing $8,200, which were ordered primarily for illustration before congressional committees, have failed to reach the city to date despite the fact that the projects are virtually assured of being included in District appropriations. They are to be of the Municipal Center and the Klingle Valley Bridge.

The contract for the cardboard model of the Municipal Center called for its completion by January 1, and it was even promised by December 15. After Municipal Architect A. L. Harris and members of his staff have made eight trips to New York, where the work is being done, the date of arrival has been set forward several times until now it is not promised until January 30.

This model, which is costing $6,200, was requested by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. As it was not ready when needed by Maj. Gotwals in his plea to the House committee, it is no longer of use in furthering legislation, he said. Likewise, the Klingle Valley model, which was intended to show the steel work,

President Honors Democrat 'Exonerated of War Charge

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

President Hoover yesterday nominated Benedict Crowell, a prominent Cleveland, Ohio, Democrat, to be a brigadier general in the Army Reserve Corps, thereby making up somewhat for what the President always has considered a "grave injustice."

In the Wilson administration, Mr. Crowell, an engineer and builder, was Assistant Secretary of War, and his particular job was to speed up construction of cantonments.

In 1922, during the Harding administration, Mr. Crowell and six men who had been associated with him in the War Department, were indicted here in one of the famous "war

Copeland Hits Restrictions.

In the course of the day Senator Royal Copeland (Democrat), of New York, introduced a bill to remove the existing restrictions on the prescription of liquor by physicians as recommended by the Wickersham Commission.

Seeking to justify his home-raid bill Senator Howell painted a verbal picture of a National Capital flowing with liquor with nothing much done by enforcement authorities to dry it up or to molest any but the small fry among the dry law violators. He told of innocent girls who were plied with liquor and led astray.

"Liquor by the thousands of quarts is being brought into the city under diplomatic immunity and distributed to residents, he said.

His speech was something in the nature of a reply to the challenge given him a year ago by President Hoover to supply definite and detailed facts to back up his first blast of criticism of the wetness of the National Capital. It was after that challenge that Mr. Howell drafted his home-raid bill, which, incidentally, has met with the disapproval of District officials and Attorney General Mitchell.

Found Police Unconcerned.

"I found," Senator Howell said, "that the Boar dof Commissioners, the governing body of the District of Columbia, has no legal concern respecting the enforcement of prohibition, nor was the board anxious for any.

"I found that 1,262 of the 1,300 Washington policemen—97 per cent—had no duties whatever in connection with liquor violations, except the apprehension of intoxicated motorists and pedestrians.

"I found that but four police officers, supplied with one automobile of uncertain vintage, were detailed to stop bootleg liquor filtering into Washington by the 24 highways leading into the city.

"I found that of the hundreds of Federal agents of the prohibition unit not more than three or four were actually on duty in the Nation's Capital.

Heard Many Complaints.

"I found that there were justifiable complaints because of the restoration of policemen to the District payroll after suspension for drunkenness while on duty; because of the appointment to and maintenance in office of enforcement personnel unquestionably wet—both personally and constitutionally; because of the congestion of the court dockets; and complaints because of a not unusual attitude on the part of some judges to give defendants better than a sporting chance by leaning backwards in prohibition cases, to say nothing of a manifest tendency to multiply the technical hazards of the judicial golf course to such an extent as to render it difficult and often impossible for prosecutors to secure convictions for patent liquor violations.

"I found that bootleggers freely maintained storages of liquor in the city without interference.

Lead Charmed Life.

"I found that not only was Washington a virtual sanctuary for stores of bootleg liquor but that, professionally, high-class bootleggers led a charmed life, while the hazard of the common garden variety was nominal, as evidenced by the ten-year record of one offender: Number of violations charged, 54; time served in jail, not one day; forfeitures and fines paid, $390, or at the rate of $39 per annum, a moderate occupation tax, indeed.

"I found that, contrary to law and the Constitution as set forth in opinions filed by the Department of Justice, persons of diplomatic status were securing the unlawful delivery in Washington of hundreds of thousands of quarts of liquor annually by virtue of permits and protection afforded by the executive branch of the Government.

"I found that one person claiming diplomatic status, but not residing in a legation, had thus secured the unlawful delivery on hsi permit of more than 5,000 quarters of wine, brandy and whisky in one year.

"I found that diplomatic status had been successfully invoked for the release of a Washington Negro, arrested on the street for possession and transportation of whisky admitted to be his own. He stoked the furnace and did other janitorial jobs at one of the legations.

Liquor Held Plentiful.

"I found that from one foreign distillery was delivered in Washington, by virtue of executive permits and protection, some 13,000 quarts of diplomatic whisky within a period of three months—the equivaletn of 20 quarts for every diplomatic official and members of his family, including also maids, cooks, laundresses, chauffeurs and janitors enjoying diplomatic status in the city.

"I found that a local entertainment committee, appointed in connection with a large convention recently held in Washington, deemed it acessary, as stated by one of its members, to budget 9,000 quarts of liquor for the delectation of delegates. Service was rendered upon telephone orders by an 'official bootlegger' and his half-pint assistants. Delegates and non-delegates alike—excepting, of course, law enforcement officials—had knowledge of or freely obtained the bootlegger's number from the chairman if not from other members of the entertainment committee.

Says Hotels Violate Laws.

"I found that the hotels of the city, and especially the great hostleries, were hotbeds of liquor violations with never a raid or a prosecution of the principals involved. Evidence of this is contained in the police records and files of the prohibition unit involving five prominent hotels.

"I found that it seemed to be the notion here in the Nation's Capital, possibly uncrystallized in the minds of many, that prohibition is for the masses. That it is not for rank, wealth and others willing to pay cover charges. It was the little fellow upon whom the majesty of the law was concentrating."

HOOVER SEEN AS DRY, REMAINS RETICENT

it is far too early to divide the party into a wet and dry camp.

Stand Already Misunderstood.

There is a bit of history in connection with the seeming fiendishness with which Washington correspondents, one and all, stamped Mr. Hoover's message as dry. It was because of a very unpleasant experience they had in the campaign of 1928 in trying to read between the lines.

Pretty much the same outcry developed against the prohibition phase of the President's Palo Alto acceptance address. The weight of this seemed to be dry and the Republican wet newspapers, particularly those in New York and Chicago, stood aghast. Then one day Col. William J. Donovan, then Assistant Attorney General, went out to Palo Alto and conferred with Mr. Hoover. After the conference he communicated with the correspondents of two big wet Republican papers and told them in an authoritative tone that he was prepared to state that by a certain reference Mr. Hoover had made he had intended to be wet.

The two newspapers in question drew a sigh of relief and throughout the campaign kept pointing to this reference as assurance that Mr. Hoover was wet.

Have Grown Cynical.

This time both papers promptly catalogued his message as dry and in all the wet abuse that has been heaped upon hmi since they have been about the loudest. And the correspondents, it is right funny, when those unofficial fellows come around whispering what purports to be the real low-down, they, the correspondents, just look at them and laugh.

So cynical have they become, in fact, that the inescapable fact that Mr. Hoover did not absolutely close the door, makes no impression on them, none at all.

The matter is by no means ended. Senator Tydings may very well have the votes to force an investigation of the Wickersham Commission, and certainly the matter is to be aired on th floor as soon as the Senate can get to it.

n the meantime, the Democrats are talking about the feasibility of adopting the Wickersham report; that is, the findings and the solution proposed by nine members as their platform. Those who are entertaining the idea think it would be the best yet.

Tick-Tock as Standby Signal.

London, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—When there are brief gaps in the program—two or three minutes—the British Broadcasting Corporation sends out a tick-tock signal to indicate the station is still on the air. The idea comes from the continent.

HOUSE GROUP BACKS SHIP MODERNIZATION

Lower Chamber Seen to Be Asked to Sanction $30,000,000 Bill.

HAS SENATE APPROVAL

(Associated Press.)

The House will be asked shortly to sanction $30,000,000 for battleship modernization in a bill already passed by the Senate and approved yesterday by the House naval committee.

Although opponents have intimated they will carry to the floor their contentions that battleships are obsolete, proponents believe it will be voted on next week and sent to the President for his signature so enough money can be appropriated this session to begin the work.

The proposal approved would cover estimated expenditures of $10,101,250 on the New Mexico, $9,821,250 on the Mississippi, and $9,871,250 on the Idaho. Modernization of these vessels was permitted by the Washington and London treaties.

Chairman Britten of the naval committee said it was hoped an appropriation may be included in the second deficiency bill.

Representative French (Republican), Idaho, said:

"I still believe we would get more for our money if we spent it on new construction."

African Grass May Aid Dairy Farmers as Feed

Houston, Tex., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—A species of African grass, grown to a height of 16 feet on the South Texas farm of E. W. Gruss, ma, aid the dairyman who no longer has the open range to draw on for feeding.

Gruss has experimented with the grass, called Napier, for twelve years. For years he was a United States Government agricultural agent. With the aid of the department at Washington he obtained a number of roots to begin his work.

As cow feed, he said, the large leaves are excellent. They contain 3.5 per cent protein and 14 per cent carbohydrates in the green state and 11.32 per cent protein and 41 per cent carbohydrates when cured.

Aged Car Pauses 60 Days At Capitol, Is Given Tow

Representative Garner Reports Auto Parked Without Lights, Battery or Generator; Driver Admits Sad-looking Vehicle Is Seriously Ill.

Alongside the sleek congressional limousines it looked rather sick.

Its looks, an interview with its owner confirmed, did not at all belie its condition. That is why it sat for more than two months in a driveway beside the Capitol, without a battery, without lights, without a claimant and with a 1930 license tag.

"It," by the way, is a touring car of somewhat ancient vintage; of a make, in fact, which no longer graces the auto shows with nice new models. Its illness has been diagnosed as generator trouble, and the offending organ has been amputated and placed in the tender care of those wizards who know all about such things, and too often take their own time about applying such knowledge.

It might have remained there indefinitely had it not been for Representative John N. Garner, of Texas. Representative Garner may have noticed it while looking for a place to park the limousine which will be his if House Democrats achieve a majority and he displaces Speaker Nicholas Longworth. On the other hand, it may simply have forced itself into his consciousness, after remaining 60 days in one place—record unusual enough for an automobile these days.

Anyway, someone from Mr. Garner's office showed it to Capitol police. Some work on the part of the force unearthed the fact that its ownership is vested in Harold P. Kelley, assistant disbursing clerk in the House. Mr. Kelley was notified.

The owner said yesterday that it would be towed, before curfew sounded the knell of parting day, to a garage where it might await, with maximum comfort and minimum publicity, the replacement of its vital organ.

RED CROSS HEARINGS WILL BEGIN MONDAY

Officials to Tell House of Opposition to Senate's Relief Measure.

DELAY CHARGE IS MADE

(Associated Press.)

Red Cross officials will be given an opportunity Monday to tell the House why arey are opposed to the Senate's $25,000,000 appropriation to finance their activities.

While Democratic spokesmen talked of "deliberate delay," Speaker Longworth yesterday referred the proposal to the appropriations committee for investigation.

Representative Cramton, chairman of th esubcommittee instrusted with the inquiry, announced the hearings would begin Monday.

President Hoover is determinedly opposed to the proposal. His friends in the Mouse are anxious to maintain his position there, but fear they have not sufficient votes to do so.

Sent to Committee.

When Speaker Longworth announced the bill was being sent to committee Representative Garner, of Texas, the Democratic leader, asked if any "deliberate delay" was involved.

Cramton replied the committee would not hold the bill any longer than absolutely necessary.

The proposal was attached as an amendment to the Interior Department bill, one of the measures that must be passed before adjournment, March 4, if a special session is to be avoided.

John Barton Payne, national chairman of the Red Cross, yesterday estimated nearly a million persons would be receiving assistance by February 1 if calls for aid continue to increase at the same rate as in the last few days.

McAdoo Urges $50,000,000.

William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, in a telegram read in the Senate yesterday urged "immediate appropriation of $50,000,000, or the authorization of the use of an equivalent amount of Farm Board wheat," to relieve Nationwide distress.

The message was in reply to a telegram from John Barton Payne, asking his aid in the Red Cross drive for $10,000,000. Both telegrams were read at the rejuest of Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama.

"I shall gladly do everything in my power," said Mr. McAdoo. "While I approve every appeal to private generosity and charity, I do not believe response will be sufficiently speedy and ample to meet the situation. Even if $10,000,000 is immediately raised, it will go only a short way to relieve distress."

Will Rogers Finds Still Used as Relief Kitchen

England, Ark., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—A monshine still working as a schoolhouse soup kitchen brought a touch of humor to Will Rogers' motor trip through this section of the Arkansas drought area today.

The flying humorist alighted from his car at the central rural school east of here at the noon hour. Several hundred children were in line before the big copper cooker.

With Harvey C. Couch, State chairman of Red Cross relief and other relief workers, he had spent the morning motoring through barren, drought seared acres of farm lands in search of first hand information for use on his Southwestern tour to aid the Red Cross $10,000,000 relief fund. Going to Pine Bluff late today he took off with Capt. Frank M. Hawks in a Navy plane for Fort Worth, Tex.

100,000 Families in State Will Be Dependent Soon

St. Louis, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—William M. Baxter, manager of the Midwestern branch of the Red Cross, said today more than 500,000 people, or approximately 100,000 families, in Arkansas, will be dependent on the Red Cross for food by February 1.

"This is more than a quarter of the entire population of the State," he declared.

"Food needs," he said, "are being given prior consideration and clothing needs, which are increasing, will be met as they appear. Red Cross work is organized under the leadership of 20 field workers and eight accountants.

"The size of the task throughout the drought area is growing by leaps and bounds. Estimates become obsolete a few days after they are prepared. The job has literally quadrupled since the first of January. The needs are growing for the stricken families have exhausted all their resources and are dependent wholly on outside help."

Pacific Area Increases Pineapple Production

San Francisco, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—An increase in the production of pineapples of the Hawaiian or smooth cayenne variety is reported throughout the Pacific area.

The government of Formosa is importing 1,000,000 plants from Hawaii and private companies in the Fiji Islands, the Philippines, Haiti and Africa have established plantations to ascertain if the Hawaiian pineapple can be cultivated commercially in those areas.

The mid-Pacific island variety of pineapple is of large size, has a high sugar content and is freer from fiber than most varieties.

Miamians Face Charge Of Stealing Bungalow

Miami, Fla., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Warrants charging grand larceny in connection with the alleged theft of a seven-room house were sworn out against Jack Conners and Martin Reese, Miamians, today. K. L. Hutchinson, in an affidavit before a justice of the peace, said after returning from an extended absence he found only an empty lot where once stood his bungalow, 6 miles west of Coral Gables. The house, he said, has been located in the northwestern section of Miami.

Officers quoted Connors and Reese as saying they held a deed to the house and believed they had the right to put it where they pleased.

CANADIAN PREMIER TO VISIT DISTRICT

Unofficial Discussion Seen on Problems Affecting Two Nations.

TO TALK WITH HOOVER

(Associated Press.)

An opportunity for a full and frank discussion of Canadian-American problems will be afforded officials here next week, with the arrival of Prime Minister A. B. Bennett of Canada, for a brief unofficial visit.

Emphasizing that the Prime Minister was not coming to the United States "on business," Hume Wrong, Canadian Charge d'Affairs, has advised the State Department of the projected trip. Premier Bennett will arrive January 31.

Department officials said last night that no plans have been made yet for the entertainment of the distinguished visitor, but the stay in Washington probably will include an exchange of calls with President Hoover.

Purpose Not Explained.

The projected trip, it was said authoritatively, is not in connection with any particular problem between the two countries, but follows out the Premier's desire to visit Washington and see the Canadian legation here, before the opening of the Canadian Parliament next month.

Every effort was made by State Department and Legation officials to keep the plan secret, officials of both declining to comment when a report regarding it spread yesterday.

Mr. Bennett will be the first Canadian Prime Minister to visit the American capital since 1927 when the former Liberal Prime Minister, W. L. McKenzie King came here.

The extent of discussions between President Hoover and the Prime Minister was a matter of conjecture last night.

St. Lawrence Is Problem.

One of the outstanding problems between the two countries is the St. Lawrence waterway project.

The United States is now awaiting a reply to a note of September 2, 1930, inquiring "whether the Canadian government now finds itself in a position" to proceed with steps to make the proposed seaway a reality.

Other questions concern immigration and liquor. Reports from Canada have indicated that the latter question may be reopened at the forthcoming parliamentary session, in a discussion over the feasibility of continuing Canada's liquor export ban, which has assisted in the prevention of liquor smuggling across the border.

THIRD SUPPLY BILL PASSED BY SENATE

Agriculture Measure, With $216,000,000 Total, Is Quickly Voted.

$125,000,000 FOR ROADS

(Associated Press.)

Passing its third supply bill in as many days, the Senate yesterday moved abreast of its legislative calendar for the first time this session.

It gave its approval to the Agricultural measure, carrying $125,000,000 to become available immediately for road construction, and sent the bill back to the House for approval of amendments, just as it had the first deficiency bill and the Interior measure.

Quick passage of the Agriculture measure brightened the hopes of leaders of getting through with the necessary work confronting Congress by March 4 and thus avoiding an extra session, in the spring, of the new and closely divided Congress.

The bill provided $214,000,000 for next year's operation of the Agricultural Department. The Senate added to it about $2,500,000 for reloaning to farmers in the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama the funds repaid on loans in those States from the emergency flood fund of last year.

The Agricultural measure is the fourth of the eleven regular appropriation bills the Senate must dispose of before March 4. None of these has been sent to the White House, however.

Its passage cleared the Senate's calendar of bills and opened the way again for general legislation.

FRAUD IS ALLEGED IN DAVIS PRIMARY

Allegheny County Ballots Tampered With, Nye's Committee sI Told.

FIGHT HARD, IS CLAIM

(Associated Press.)

Charges of fraud in Allegheny County in the conduct of the Pennsylvania 1930 primary election and disclaimers that Senator James J. Davis had little difficulty securing his nomination were presented yesterday to the Senate campaign funds committee.

Ralph H. Frank, a Pittsburgh attorney, representing interests aligned with Gov. Gifford Pinchot, accompanied his testimony concerning differences in the official count and the recount of ballots in 64 boxes in the county with the statement that two of the county officials have displayed an "unwillingness" to prosecute election frauds.

Naming Presiding Judge James R. McFarland, of the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court, and District Attorney Andrew Park, the witness later acknowledged there may be "an honest difference of opinion" between the two and himself as to a conception of their duty. He added he intended no intimation by "innuendo or otherwise" of the integrity of the two men was to be conveyed by his remarks.

A supporter of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, Davis' opponent for the Republican senatorial nomination, added the testimony that Senator Davis had a "bitter fight" on his hands for the nomination in Philadelphia and elsewhere in the State.

The witness, James A. Walker, former secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, said everybody in Pennsylvania knew Grundy was "a hard fighter" and his opposition required expenditure of "a lot of money" by Davis backers.

The witness said he was unable to state what portion of the total Davis-Brown expenditures was used for Davis.

Walker said Grundy was strong in several counties adjoining Philadelphia as well as in a number of upstate agricultural counties, and that Davis had an "uphill fight" in those places.

In Philadelphia Davis had the advantage because he was supported by the city Republican organization, Walker said, but that did not alter the fact that "Senator Davis did have a contest" there.

POLICE QUELL MOB ASSAILING BRUENING

HEAVY GUARD REQUIRED

Berlin, Jan. 23—(N.Y.W.N.S.)—A large force of mounted and foot police had to be called upon at Chemnitz today, to protect Chancellor Heinrich Bruening from a hostile mob of Communists and unemployed, who turned out to denounce him when he arrived there for a conference with Saxon industrialists.

Cries of "down with the dictator" greeted the Chancelor when he descended from his train. The police had difficulty in clearing the station platform and keeping the milling crowds away from Bruening's automobile, as he was driven to a hotel.

Officials present surrounded the chancellor and escorted him the few steps from the railroad car to his automobile. A lorry filled with policemen preceded the chancellor through the streets and two other lorries, similarly loaded, followed his car.

At the hotel the crowds gathered again and continued their hostile cries, but finally dispersed after being driven off repeatedly by the police.

An official announcement here today gave 4,765,000 as the number of Germany's unemployed, an increase of 408,000 over the total of two weeks ago.

German railroad companies have just reported a deficit for eleven months of the year 1930 of 772,000 marks ($18,389), a larger deficit than had been anticipated for the entire year. The post office department has reported to the Reichstag that the receipts for 1930 were 85,000,000 marks ($20,247,000) below estimates of what they would be.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

NOW in all of this raging controversy over the Wickersham report we do not want to lose sight of Commissioner Woodcock's continual bragging over his prohibition agents. He has long since gone past the stage of the proud father discussing his first born.

Seldom a day passes that he does not say something about how gentlemanly his agents are coming to be, how intelligent, how cute and how adept at catching on to things. We are quite satisfied that it is only a short time before he will be insisting that we accept them in our homes, that our children be made to play with them, so handsome and genteel have his boys come to be.

* * * *

NOW frankly, we see a parental selfishness in Mr. Woodcock's dressing his boys up like this. He is, to our mind, making the mistake of many parents we have known.

We do not believe that the Children's Bureau will bear him out in making his boys bow and say something very formal whenever they are introduced to grown people. It tends to make them artificial, and while we might say upon observing such polite and well-mannered boys that they reflect favorably upon their father, we lose sight of the father's selfishness in making them act this way.

It is not natural for prohibition agents to bow and act always as if they were in the drawing room. You know it isn't. Their natural bent is to give play to the exuberance of youth, to wield hatchets and axes and cut up the furniture and trample all over the place.

* * * *

WE fully expect Mr. Woodcock in his unconscious efforts to reflect credit upon his ability to rear children, will soon have his agents wearing trousers with buckles at the knees, patent leather shoes and Buster Brown collars and Windsor ties. There is no question that we older people would like to have them around us thus attired, but what will their fellows think of them.

Is it fair, simply to gratify our selfish parental pride, to make these fellows the brunt of jibes of other agents, the customs agents, the agents looking for Bolsheviks and the Children's Bureau agents. Is it fair to make the prohibition fellows go among them with taunts of "sissy," ringing in their ears?

A parent shouldn't try to impose his personality upon a child. Let it fellow its natural bent, and every one knows that the natural bent of the prohibition boys is to raise hell.

GRAND JURY PROBES PAPERS PITTS USED

mission charges, by the introduction of these papers. The sections cover contempt of court in the introduction of fraudulent evidence, perjury, conspiracy to commit perjury and subornation of perjury.

Any of the men involved can be indicted on any or all of the charges.

Emory L. Coblentz, Maryland State senator and president of the Central Trust Co., of Frederick, Md., who introduced the papers in question at the trial, was the last witness to appear before the jurors yesterday. He was closeted in the grand jury room for an hour when the jurors adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock. It is believed that he has not yet completed his story and may testify again today.

Claimed Right to Money.

The papers he produced at the trial concerned money taken from the Beverly Building Corporation, sponsors of two Pittsburgh, Pa., buildings, the Law and Finance and Insurance Exchange Buildings. They purported to show that Pitts had a legal right to take the money he was accused of embezzling.

C. Elbert Anadale and J. H. Edwards, jr., convicted with Pitts, preceded Coblentz in the grand jury room.

The nature of their testimony was shrouded in secrecy but the two are believed to have told all they know of the defense thrown up around the charges they faced with Pitts at the trial.

Edwards was clad in a light tan sweater and dark unpressed trousers. He had come up from Lorton Reformatory where he has been confined since he severed connections with his former chief and dropped his appeal.

Greeted Reporters Group.

When he came out of the jury room after being in there 20 minutes he walked over, smiling, to a group of newspaper reporters he grew to know during the long days of the drawn-out investigations and trial.

"I guess I can still shake hands with you fellows, can't I?" he asked, as he held out his hands.

Both he and Anadale were closeted in a room adjoining the grand jury chambers before and after testifying and no one was allowed to question them.

Pitts is in jail pending an appeal from a fourteen-year sentence. Anadale is serving nine years, having withdrawn his appeal, while Edwards already is in the penitentiary serving the three-year term he received after he refused to appeal.

DELAYED CARDBOARD MODELS USELESS

has been several times delayed. It is to cost $2,000.

"All I want next time is a set of drawings and pictures," Maj. Gotwals said.

The municipal architect's office saved the Engineer Commissioner some embarrassment on the Municipal Center, however, by rushing through a clay model which was being made for the use of the ten special architects working on the plans of the project. By working almost all one night the city architects had the model ready for an exhibition in Maj. Gotwals' office when the House committee asked to see it.

The cardboard model when it arrives will probably be placed in the Treasury Department for exhibition, according to Mr. Harris. It was made by this expensive process, he said, so that it might compare with the cardboard model of the proposed Federal triangle buildings now being exhibited.

SENATE ACTS TO GIVE POWER ROW TO COURT

ministration, Senator Watson (Indiana), Republican leader, said:

"This matter is entirely out of the hands of the Senate.

"These commissioners were duly appointed and confirmed by the Senate and notice was duly sent by the Senate to the President. I regard this as a closed incident, one in which the Senate has nothing to do, and one in which it can have nothing to do. I see no good purpose that can be served by these proceedings."

Norris said the commissioners' dismissal of Russell and King "means more to the American people than any action taken by a subordinate official in 50 years."

Norris Criticizes Hoover.

"I can reach no other conclusion," Norris said, "than that Smith was acting in line with what he believed to be the desire of the Secretary of the Interior and the President.

"The fact that the PrPresident came to his defense and the Secretary of Interior has taken in Bonner seems to justify that conclusion.

"If the President is not now with the power trust he will be after 1932."

Chairman Cousens, of the committee to which the names were sent, said he planned to take no action on them pending the proposed court action.

Meanwhile, however, the proposal was made that the nominations should be recalled from the committee and formally rejected by the Senate, in order to strengthen its case in court.

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, took the view the Senate's case would be weak in court unless it actually rejected the nominations.

Attorney-General Mitchell, in his opinion to the President, took the position that the Senate's notification to the President of the confirmation of the three commissioners was "a deliberate expression to the President of the Senate's unqualified consent of the immediate appointment, and that it amounts to a decision by the Senate * * * to place reconsideration beyond its power if the President should act and make the appointment before a request of the Senate for a return of the papers reaches him."

One Injured as Kansas Capitol Catches Fire

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—An explosion of chemicals or oil in the janitor's supply home of the State Capitol late today for a time threatened the building and painfully burned Harold Rude, custodian.

The flames, confined to the storeroom supplies, were extinguished by the fire department. Mr. Rude rushed from the room after the explosion set his clothing afire. A passerby, R. B. Long, threw him to the floor and smothered the blaze.

Man Sentenced to Die For Fire Killing Seven

St. Louis, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—A circuit court jury tonight convicted Ralph Pierson, former co-owner of the Buckingham Hotel annex, in connection with a fire December 5, 1927, in which seven persons died, and fixed his punishment at death.

Andrew B. Meadows, former night watchman at the annex, previously had been convicted and sentenced to death. Two others are awaiting trial.

FRANCE MAY CALL BRIAND AS PREMIER

SITUATION IS MUDDLED

Paris, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Political observers were looking tonight to Aristide Briand as a likely candidate for the task of forming a new French government to replace that of Theodore Steeg, which fell by 10 votes in the Chamber yesterday on the issue of price fixing for wheat.

The experts, however, believe that if M. Briand should be asked to form a cabinet he would decline, partly because of ill health, but principally because he believes he can serve France better by continuing his work for international peace. He has refused to become prime minister three times in the last year and a half.

M. Briand was still at Geneva tonight, taking an active part in the meetings of the League of Nations Council, and the experts at home seem to believe that Pierre Flandin probably would be called by President Doumergue to build a cabinet.

His would be a slightly revamped version of the Tardieu cabinet, which was succeeded by Steeg's.

If M. Flandin should not accept the job it was thought the appointment might fall to Pierre Laval, whose product would be a twin brother to the Steeg cabinet, leaving the situation just as confused as it was before.

Students of politics are agreed that a stable government is impossible so long as the parties in the Chamber are split up as they are at present. Dissolution of the Parliament is one answer, but the president is reluctant to resort to so extreme a measure except as a last resort. M. Doumergue's term ends next June, and he is not anxious for a general election now.

The groups of the left are loudest in the demand for dissolution, for they are hopeful that an election now would give them a landslide.

Labor oHlds Italy Frustrates Peace

World FederationContends End of Dictatorship Is Prerequisite.

Zurich, Jan. 23 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—A declaration that "complete liquidation" of the Fascist dictatorship in Italy is a prerequisite to the political pacification of Europe and to restoration of economic and industrial normalcy throughout the world was issued here today by the International Federation of Trade Unions, which has just concluded a discussion of the unemployment problem.

Executives of the union, of which Arthur Henderson, rBitish Foreign Secretary, is a former president, and of the Socialist International were represented on a commission which adopted a resolution saying in part:

"The commission issues an urgent warning against the efforts of Fascist imperialism in Italy to collect a number of states, under a slogan for revision of peace treaties, into an alliance dangerous to peace.

Liquidation of the Fascist dictatorship and its aspirations is a preliminary condition for the political pacification of Europe without which the world economic system cannot recover."

Jugoslavian King To "Gamble" Life

1,200 Rebellious Croats Jailed for Ruler's Trip to Province's Capital.

Vienna, Jan. 23 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—Much anxiety is felt for the safety of King Alexander of Yugo-Slavia, who is preparing to gamble with his life by making a trip to Zagreb, capital of Croatia, most dissatisfied province in his realm, in an effort to save his dictatorship. Ever since last January there have been attacks in Croatia on trains, public buildings and polict posts and numerous Serbians have been murdered, including M. Stefek, notorious police agent.

In order to lessen the danger to the king on his visit to Croatia, which begins next Sunday, 1,200 Croats, known to be members of revolutionary societies hostile to the Government, have been arrested and will be kept behind bars as long as Alexander is in their native province.

The king's danger is fully realized in Belgrade, the national capital. In case of an "accident" to him it has already been arranged that a regency council be appointed, consisting of his chief minister, Gen. Zivkovitch, Prince Paul Karageorgevitch and aPtriarch Varnava.

Features in The Post Tomorrow

The United States of Europe. A topic which has the other side of the Atlantic agog and which is causing no end of discussion over here. David Rankin Barbee presents some interesting sidelights on the situation in a special feature story in tomorrow's Post. This article tells of the proponents and opponents of the scheme, their plans and the reasons for their stands.

Heading the list of attractive features and stories in the tabloid magazine is a yarn entitled "Murder in Washington Becomes an Art," particularly timely and entrancing because of recent developments in the crime situation of the Capital.

Under the caption of "A Real Noah's Ark on the Potomac" the magazine offers many unusual details of what is being done at the National Zoo to maintain species of all kinds of animals. Every animal-lover will enjoy this educational feature.

Another of Edith Johnson's helpful talks will be found in the magazine dealing with problems which the reader faces every day. Write Miss Johnson for assistance, which will be given confidential treatment.

Then, too, tomorrow's Post brings all the regular features which have made it so popular; a second "picture study" of Washington in a full page of rotogravure; the comics; sports of all sorts and the latest in news and pictures.

MEMBER OF BOARD RAPS RESERVE PLAN

Policy Pursued in 1928 and 1929 Aided Speculation, Miller Says.

FOR FREE 'OPEN MARKET'

(Associated Press.)

Legal limitations on "open market" operations in the Federal Reserve system were opposed before the Senate banking investigating committee yesterday by Adolph C. Miller, a senior member of the Federal Reserve Board, as a means of preventing credit inflations in periods of undue speculative activity.

Miller, however, blamed the 1927 purchase of Government securities on the open market by the reserve banks for the great credit flow to the stock market in 1928 and 1929. He said if a different policy had been followed at the time the country would be much better off today.

He suggested as a remedy that large scale open market purchases within the system be made subject to the approval of at least five of the eight members of the Reserve Board and that the reserve banks be operated primarily as "institutions of rediscount."

For Examining Affiliates.

He proposed further that corporate affiliates of banks in the system be "rigidly and regularly examined" and that improvements in the operation and administration of the system rather than more restrictions by law were preferable.

He told Chairman Glass that the present 2 per cent rediscount rate in New York, the lowest in history, was "notification that credit conditions are very comfortable and easy in the leading money market" and "might do something to release the country from the grip of fear."

Miller described the open market operations of 1927 as the "greatest and most costly error" ever made by the Federal Reserve or any ohter banking system and predicted another crash in seven years if such practices were not controlled.

Excess Reserves Created.

By these large purchases of Government securities, he said, the Reserve banks created excess reserves in member banks and caused both these institutions and corporations to invest in the call market.

He agreed with Glass that the framers of the Federal Reserve act never intended the open-market practice should "submerge" the rediscount policy, and that the latter, instead of being employed to repress stock market activities, should be used to "test out or restrain developments that may be in process."

It should never be used to penalize legitimate business, he told Glass.

2 NEBRASKANS HELD ON NYE QUIZ CHARGE

WILL PLEAD ON MONDAY

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Two Nebraskans, one a Republican leader, were under indictment for perjury tonight as a result of the United States Senate's campaign funds investigation in this state.

A Federal grand jury true bill named Victor Seymour, of Lincoln, former manager of the Western headquarters of the Republican national senatorial campaign committee, at Denver, Colo., on eight counts. Another true bill returned two counts against George W. Norris, a grocer, formerly located at Broken Bow, Nebr., who sought a place on the Republican primary ballot last August as an opponent to Senator George W. Norris.

The indictment of Seymour was based on his testimony before the Senate campaign funds committee headed by Senator Gerald P. Nye, which last summer sought the sources of the financing of the primary campaign against Senator Norris. Norris was later reelected by a majority of 75,000 votes.

Denied Campaign Interest.

Seymour told the committee he had not taken an active interest in the Nebraska senatorial campaign and that he had no knowledge of the filing of Grocer Norris until he read of it in the newspapers.

But Miss Esther M. Alton, formerly employed as a stenographer in Seymour's office, later testified before the committee that he had conducted a "straw vote" to ascertain the most popular candidate to oppose Norris in the Republican senatorial primary. She also testified that the statement announcing the entrance of Grocer Norris into the campaign was typed in Seymour's office.

Another witness before the committee, W. M. Stebbins, at that time State treasurer and a candidate also for the senatorial nomination last year, said that he had financed the filing of the grocer, giving Seymour $50 to pay the filing fee and also giving a $500 bond for the grocer's campaign fund.

Norris, the grocer, recanted previous testimony after hearing Miss Alton on the stand, and told Chairman Nye he had received the bond. The grocer's filing was held illegal by the Nebraska Supreme Court because of its belated arrival at the capitol.

Banker Financed Ballot.

Walter W. Head, Chicago and Omaha banker, also a witness before the committee, admitted he had financed the "straw vote" conducted by Seymour and paid him $4,000 for the work. Seymour resigned his position with the senatorial committee after Miss Alton testified, and returned to Lincoln. His attorneys today said he desired to make no statement. He expected to appear before the Federal District Court within a few days. The grocer's attorney said he would be in Lincoln Monday to answer to the indictment.

Scores of witnesses were questioned by the committee during its hearings in Nebraska, and Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, recently was questioned in Washington about his efforts to have Senator Norris defeated.

The committee has investigated senatorial campaigns in several States, but the indictments returned here today were the first criminal charges to result.

Federal Judge T. C. Munger set bond for Seymour and Norris at $1,000 each.

P.D. ARMOUR QUITS POSTS WITH FIRM

Vice President and Director Resigns as T. George Lee Becomes President.

OTHER OFFICERS NAMED

Chicago, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Philip D. Armour today resigned as first vice president and a director of Armour & Co. He issued a statement saying, "under the circumstances I had no alternative."

Mr. Armour's statement, which he declined to amplify, followed by a few hours the election of T. George Lee as president of Armour & Co. to succeed the late F. Edson White.

The statement follows:

"I have today resigned as a director of Armour & Co., the severance of my association of nearly seventeen years and that of the Armour family for over 60 years with the thousand of Armour employes whom I was privileged to call my friends is naturally the greatest disappointment in my life, but under the circumstances I had no alternative."

Philip L. Reed, treasurer, was elected first vice president and retained, in addition, in his present capacity. Fred J. Reynolds, general purchasing agent, was named as a vice president, and G. H. Johnstone was elected assistant treasurer.

Judge Sellers to Seek Post Again.

Judge Kathryn Sellers, who is serving her second term on the bench announced yesterday that she will be a candidate for reappointment as judge in Juvenile Court. The announcement was prompted by the fact that she has received numerous inquiries as to her intentions, she said.

Y. W. C. A. Holds Community Night.

The Young Women's Christian Association held its first community night of the season last night in its building at Seventeenth and K streets northwest. A community song arranged by Miss Mary M. Burnett and Miss Helen Middleton was on the program. Miss Hettie P. Anderson was in charge of the affair.

DAISY DE BOE FAINTS ON HEARING VERDICT

sat ever since the trial opened, January 13.

"Oh, for God's sake," she wailed. "I'm not guilty. If they wanted to convict me on one count, why didn't they convict me on all?"

Her voice broke, and she became hysterical. Friends at her side lifted her from her chair and carried the limp figure out of the courtroom and up a narrow hallway into the jury chamber.

One juror explained why no verdict was reported for so many hours. "There were eight of us voting for an acquittal and four of us voting for a conviction," he said. "Neither side would give way, and as a last resort an agreement was reached to return a verdict of guilty on one count, with the understanding that we would recommend to the court, in passing sentence, that the defendant be given clemency."

Clara Bow, the red-haried "it" girl of the films, was content with a ten-word statement today concerning the grand-theft conviction of her former secretary.

"For Daisy's sake," she said, "I hope the court will be lenient."

The court set Monday, January 26, for the passing of sentence. Miss de Boe a half hour after the verdict regained her composure to a slight extent, and on the arms of comforting friends and a watchful matron of the county jail, was led to a cell, where she must remain until sentence is passed. The judge ruled he could not allow her bail of $1,000 to stand.

A wave of nervous tension gripped the courtroom as the jury of elderly men and women filed into the box, where they listened for a week to tales of flaming youth in gay Hollywood.

So unexpected was the verdict that the court clerk had no time in the ensuing confusion to obtain sufficient bailiffs to control the crowd and newspaper photographers.

They overflowed inside the courtroom rail that separates the judge's bench from the seats of the spectators. Newspaper photographers for one of the few times in the history of Los Angeles courts, succeeded in getting their cameras in the courtroom and taking pictures as the verdict was read.

PRESIDENT CONFERS HONOR ON CROWELL

fraud" cases. Eventually they were exonerated.

Ordinarily, the nomination of a man to be an officer in the Army Reserve Corps is regarded at the White House as a routine matter. In sending Mr. Crowell's nomination to the Senate, however, Mr. Hoover went to the trouble to issue a formal statement. He said:

"I have today forwarded to the Senate the nomination of Mr. Benedict Crowell, of Cleveland, as brigadier general in the Reserve Corps of the Army.

"Mr. Crowell has long been a member of the Reserve Corps, and gave most distinguished service to the country in important capacities during the war.

"This promotion in itself is not so material as the opportunity it affords to indicate the feeling of his many associates and friends in the War Department and my own feeling over what we have always considered was an inadvertent but yet a grave injustice."

The indictment here by a special grand jury of Mr. Crowell and his six associates was an outgrowth of the war fraud investigation conducted by the Graham committee of the House, an investigation that produced among other things the explosive "Hell and Maria" of Charles Gates Dawes.

The indictment was obtained by Roscoe McCullough of Ohio, who had been a member of the Graham committee, but who, by this time, was an Assistant Attorney General under Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty. Since then McCullough has served a brief period in the United States Senate.

The indictment charged Mr. Crowell and the others had conspired to get control of the War Department construction program for their benefit and gain and alleged, among other things, they had done away with competitive bidding.

The attorneys for the indicted men were Frank Hogan and Henry L. Stimson, now Secretary of State. These two demurred from the indictment, and former Associate Justice Adolph Hoehling sustained their demurrer. In doing so, he made a statement that was a sweeping vindication of Mr. Crowell and the others.

SPECIAL ELECTION ASKED IN PETITION

Freehold Property Owners in Falls Church Back $125,000 Flotation.

IS FOR WATER SYSTEM

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

Chairman Charles Gage, of the special committee of the Town Council, Falls Church, and several citizens anhounced last night that more than the required number of signatures had been obtained to the petition asking another special election of the resident freehold property owners on the question of a $125,000 bond issue for the installation of a municipal water system.

The last election, on January 13, on this question failed because of a provision in the town charter requiring at least 50 per cent of freeholders to participate in the voting. Since the election it has been discovered that the voting lists as approved by the council were defective, as a large number of the names on the list were of nonresidents or of persons who had moved recently. When the lists were approved notices were mailed to every person whose name was on the lists. Since that time several have been returned by the postoffice as unclaimed and a number of persons have notified the council that they have sold their property and are no longer in Falls Church. If this had been known prior to the election the issue would have been approved, as 285 votes were cast at the time. It is expected that more than 100 names will be stricken from the lists of 612 names that were approved.

Mr. Gage stated that the same proposal and plans will be followed and no changes are contemplated. Mayor L. P. Daniel states that with the recent developments it is believed a more accurate list of persons entitled to vote in the election can be prepared and there is little doubt that this election will be successful, as a large number of persons that were originally opposed to the issue have stated their intention of voting favorably for the flotation at the next election.

Mayor Daniel has called a special meeting of the town council for Monday evening in the Town Hall on Washington street to consider and take action on such questions as may be presented. The petition for the water bond issue will be submitted for approval at this time and the date of the special election of resident freehold property owners will be definitely fixed for approximately twenty days later.

Another question to be considered at the meeting will be the adoption of an ordinance in place of the one that was declared invalid by Fairfax County Circuit Court earlier this week in regard to the prosecution of prohibition law violations in the town. An ordinance prepared by Commonwealth Attorney Wilson M. Farr and Mayor Daniel in accordance with the State code will be submitted for the council's adoption.

The board of supervisors of Fairfax County has held a conference with Wade Massie, member of the State highway commission, representing the section of the State which includes Fairfax County, and Representative R. Walton Moore, in regard to having old King's Highway from Penn Daw on the Washington-Richmond Highway to the Little River turnpike, by way of Telegraph road, improved before 1932.

Members of the board informed Mr. Massie that this route will be greatly in demand during the 1932 George Washington bicentennial celebration, as it would carry traffic from Mount Vernon to the west, and that the traffic congestion in and around Alexandria will be greatly relieved, if tourists can be routed around the city.

The King's highway was taken into the State system as part of the mileage allotted to Fairfax County under the Porter roads act on January 1, 1931. At the present time it is a good gravel road, but the supervisors asked that a portion of the route be relocated so as to eliminate several bad curves. They also asked that it be widened and hard surfaced, and that the work be started this summer so that it will be completed for travel in 1932.

Mr. Massie informed the board that there were no funds available at this time for the work, but he inspected the road and the proposed changes, and promised to determine if funds could be secured. Arrangements were made for the entire membership of the State Highway Commission to visit the county in the near future to inspect this and other nearby roads. In response to Mr. Massie's request the proposed new road from Mount Vernon to the Washington-Richmond highway, recommended last year by the highway committee of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, was inspected by the members of the conference.

Mr. Massie stated that under the Virginia code the State Highway Commission could not take over such a road until it had first been opened and developed by the county. It was the general opinion of the supervisors that, if this road were built it should pass the Old Mill site on the Washington estate, and join the Richmond road near Woodlawn. They did not consider it feasible to use the present right-of-way of the old road, and the route preferred was not exactly the one which the Chamber of Commerce recommended, for which a free right-of-way was promised. No action was taken on the project by the board.

A meeting of the Fairfax County school board will be held today for the purpose of considering the budget for expenses of the schools to be presented to the board of supervisors at a joint meeting with the school board on February 2.

It is understood that no delegation will be heard at today's meeting, as the time of the school board will be taken up discussing the needs for the system during the 1931-1932 term. It is probable that the petition for letters of protest against a proposed special levy for school purposes in Mount Vernon district will be presented to the board in place of the personal appearance of the delegation, and they will be considered in connection with the budget.

The Young Peoples Missionary Society of the Southern Methodist Church at Langley will hold its meeting this evening at the home of Miss Florence Grimes.

The directors of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce has estimated that it will take $900 to finance the chamber's activities until after July 1 this year, if the office and the secretary are maintained at Fairfax on the present basis, at a special meeting held at Fairfax, held to discuss ways of financing activities until the end of the present fiscal year. President Edmund H. Allen appointed Capt. Thurlow White, Mrs. G. Ashley Money and Edward C. Gibbs as a committee to make a survey of the books and to consider possibilities of raising sufficient funds to carry on the chamber's work and to report its findings with recommendations to the directors as soon as possible. This committee will meet Thursday evening and a special meeting of the directors will be called as soon as the report is available.

The majority of those present were of the opinion that the chamber will be forced to return, at least temporarily, the volunteer basis for the secretaryship. A number of the directors stressed the need of holding the organization together and the raising an adequate fund to finance constructive projects as soon as possible. Secretary C. C. Carr stated that he believed that much of the money owing to the chamber could be collected if a drive were made, but other members doubted the wisdom of such a campaign at the present time because of the campaigns by the Red Cross, the drought relief committee and the local welfare organizations.

The Library Association was granted permission to store books in the vault until such time as the library rooms are available and ready for use.

The Fairfax-Mount Vernon local branch of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association has elected Richard R. Farr, of Fairfax, as president at a meeting held in the Farmers Club rooms at Fairfax. Ronald Blake, of Oakton, was elected first vice president; Joseph A. Wheeler, of Browns Chapel, second vice president, and Vernon Leigh, of Andrew Chapel, secretary. Ronald Blake was elected director of the Fairfax branch and Lud A. Popkins, of Groveton, was elected director of the Mount Vernon branch to represent the local at the meeting of the association that will be held in Silver Spring, Md., February 2 as delegates, with Turner Wansley, of Willard, representing the Floris branch.

Frank S. Walker, of Orange, president, and John McGill, of Washington, secretary, of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, outlined the situation now existing on the Washington market, where dairymen are faced with overproduction of milk and underconsumption. Mr. Walker reported that the price for surplus milk on the Washington market during January had been reduced from 24 to 18 cents per gallon.

This price reduction hits the Fairfax County dairymen hard, as practically every producer has some surplus to market. Anticipating a shortage of milk due to the bad season, the Washington distributors earlier in the year appealed for greater production.

Game Warden A. B. Carter calls attention of the dog owners of the county to the fact that they are subject to the payment of a fine and costs if 1931 licenses for their dogs have not been obtained before the first of February. Thus far licenses for only about one-fifth of the dogs have been obtained.

GRONER NOMINATION OPOSED AT HEARING

Attorneys Say Judge Was "Influenced" to Direct Haines Acquittal.

BORAH ASKS FOR DETAILS

Charles B. Brewer and Richard L. Merrick, former attorneys of the Department of Justice, yesterday appeared before the Senate judiciary committee subcommittee, of which Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, is chairman, and opposed the confirmation of Judge D. Laurence Groner to the District Court of Appeals.

Mr. Brewer told the committee that in the course of the trial of the wartime harness fraud case an "influential" man had visited Judge Groner at his home. Judge Groner heard the case and directed a verdict of acquittal. Messrs. Brewer and Merrick were of Government counsel engaged in prosecuting the fraud charge.

Although Mr. Brewer refused to name the influential man, Mr. Merrick said the man in mind was Senator Guy U. Goff (Republican) of West Vriginia, who was then senator-elect.

Senator Goff flatly denied the story.

The attorneys said they had been informed of such a visit from reports of Department of Justice investigators. Subsequent ot the visit, it was testified, the attitude of Judge Groner changed toward Government counsel and seemed more friendly to the defense.

Senator Borah demanded more details and announced that he would subpena Joseph Cohen, one of the investigators the attorneys said reported the night visit to thejudge.

CAREER WAS COLORFUL

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Capt. Isaac E. Emerson, 71, multimillionaire chemical manufacturer and international yachting enthusiast, died at his estate, Brooklandwood, here today after an illness of more than two months.

His physician attributed his death to a complication of diseases. In recent months he was known to have suffered from bright's disease and infirmities of age.

His career, following his graduation from the University of North Carolina was picturesque. His home on the edge of the city was one of the show places of the city and in it he entertained personages prominent in the State and Nation.

Born in North Carolina, Mr. Emerson came to Baltimore in 1891 to make his way to riches through the manufacture of a headache remedy, the formula of which was acquired by him while working as a clerk in a drug store. He led his own naval force in the Spanish-American War.

Interest in Yachting.

Mr. Emerson's interest in yachting was evidenced early in his career. He formed the Maryland Naval Reserve in 1894, and in 1898 provided the entire crew for the United States ship Dixie, and all but the four ranking officers. He was commissioned a lieutenant in the Navy and made assistant to the chief of the auxiliary naval forces. After the war he was made captain.

In addition he continued his interest in yachting, made several trips around the world in a series of vessels he owned and was an active member of several American and foreign yacht clubs. This interest led to the purchase of an estate at Naragansett Pier, R. I., which he maintained in addition to Brooklandwood here and the estate "Arcadia" in South Carolina.

Mr. Emerson first was married to a daughter of W. F. Askew of Raleigh, N. C. She was a widow and had two daughters. She divorced him in 1911 and he married Mrs. Anne Preston McCormick of New York, who survives him.

Survivors Are Listed.

His only daughter is now Mrs. Charles Minot Amory, who, as the wife of Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt, was a social leader at New York and Newport. She divorced Dr. Smith Hollis McKim, her first husband in 1911, the same year her father was divorced. Some time after Vanderbilt's death on the Lusitania she married Raymond T. Baker, former director of the United States Mint.

She divorced him in Reno and married, within a few days, Mr. Amory, member of a well known Boston family. She conducts a string of racing horses under the name of the Sagamore Stables.

Capt. Emerson was a member of the New York Yacht Club, Royal Nautique de Nice, the Harford Hunt and the Maryland Jockey Club Yacht Club of Belgium, Societie among others. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, and a Shriner.

At the Ninth Street Christian Church the pastor, Dr. B. H. Melton, will have for his Sunday evening sermon subject "When Will Bootlegging End?"

In the course of the sermon he will answer the following questions: "Is the Wickersham report constructive or destructive?" "What are the greatest hindrances to prohibition enforcement?" "Are all 'wets' bad citizens and all 'drys' good citizens?" "Do we nede more legislation or more education on the temperance question?" "Have we expected too much of prohibition?" "Is our Constitution, which includes the eighteenth amendment, static?" "Has science, modern education, big business and the public conscience finally decreed that the liquor traffic has no place in this modern world?"

SPIRITUAL HEALING MEETINGS PLANNED

Conferences Will Be Held in Two Capital Churches in Coming Week.

SERVICES ARE POPULAR

The Christian Church is unwilling to say that the power of healing does not still exist in the church. Many, a great many of the prayers that are said in every Christian Church are petitions for the Great Physician "to come in healing mercy, and bless those who languish on beds of suffering." More than this, some churches hold regular healing services to which are invited the lame and the hals and those who are afflicted in any way.

Eleven years ago an English layman, James Moore Hickson, who has given his life to healing the sick, came to this country and created a great deal of excitement with missions held in Episcopal churches all over the land. He held a mission at Trinity Church in this city, and among those what sat his feet to learn, as St. Paul sat at the feet of Gamaliel, was the Rev. George Fiske Dudley, rector of the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation.

Convinced that here was a power which the church was neglecting, the rector immediately established a healing service at his church, and for eleven years now it has been quietly doing its work and pursuing the even tenor of its way. This clinic, if it can be so called, is manned by volunteer workers, who have been doing a splendid service in this city.

Now comes the Rev. John Gayner Banks, director of the Society of the Nazarene, who will hold a series of conferences on spiritual healing Monday and Tuesday next, at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, Sixteenth and Newton streets northwest. Morning sessions will be at 10:30 o'clock and evening meetings at 8 o'clock, preceded by a song service at 7:30.

The same schedule will be continued at St. Mark's, Third and A streets southeast, on Wednesday and Thursday.

The Society of the Nazarene was founded in 1909 by the Rev. Henry B. Wilson, of Boonton, N. J., for the purpose of emphasizing and healing of body, mind and spirit through the Christian gospel.

The society has guilds throughout the world. Six are in Washington, the guild of St. Mark's being the oldest.

At the headquarters of the society in Boonton, N. J., a library is maintained which distributes books on psychological, metaphysical and spiritual subjects. The Nazarene magazine is published monthly and is on the racks of two of the branch libraries of the city.

Deputy's Accounts Found Regular

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 23.—An audit of the accounts of Emmett L. Carter, deputy treasurer, who disappeared mysteriqualy a fortnight ago and was finally located in Ironton, Ohio, has been completed by Traveling Auditor L. V. Grady, from the State auditor's office, and handed to County Treasurer G. Stuart Hamm. It indicates that he has made settlement of all 1929 tickets placed in his hands for collection, there being no difference for or against him, according to a statement given out at the treasurer's office.

The condition of Carter, who was returned to his Albemarle home this week by his father, continues critical. Dr. Percy Harris, who is attending him, will allow the patient to receive but few callers, and the time of these visits is limited. It is feared that any worry or sudden excitement might permanently impair the mind of the deputy, who is suffering from a complete nervous breakdown.

Mr. Carter disappeared from his home in Scottsville early in the morning of January 3. He was finally located with relatives in Ohio, and returned to his home January 16.

BEWARE OF COLDS NOW!

If Neglected They May Pave The Way For Flu Attack

TREAT COLDS PROMPTLY BUT AVOID "DOSING"

Now that flu is in the air again health authorities advise everyone to take these common-sense precautions: Eat wisely; get plenty of sleep and fresh air; avoid undue exposure; and above all treat every cold promptly. Unless checked quickly, colds tend to pull down the body resistance and may pave the way for an attack of flu with all its serious complications.

Attack Colds at the Start

At the first sign of sniffling, sneezing or other signs that you are "catching cold," start treatment at once with Vicks VapoRub. Place some Vicks up each nostril and snuff well back. Do this several times a day. It will often prevent a little cold from developing into a big one.

If the head is clogged with mucus or phlegm, or there is much coughing, melt a teaspoonful of Vicks in a bowl or kettle of hot water and inhale the steaming vapors for five minutes at a time. This auxiliary vapor-steam treatment with Vicks has a remarkable effect in clearing the air-passages, easing the breathing, and helps keep the cold from spreading.

Double Action Effective

At bedtime, in order to get the benefit of its long-continued stimulation and inhalation effect, rub Vicks vigorously over the throat and chest and cover with warm flannel. Vicks attacks colds in two direct ways: (1) through the skin like a poultice or plaster, drawing out the tightness and soreness; and (2) at the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are inhaled direct to the irritated air-passages.

Protect Children, Especially

Children should be put to bed at the first sign of a cold, and Vicks rubbed on throat and chest. Its use brings prompt relief, and avoids constant "dosing" which often upsets the digestion. When used at bedtime, Vicks often prevents sleep-disturbing night coughs, thus permitting needed rest for both mother and child.

Don't take chances with colds NOW!

REVIVAL SERVICES IN THREE CHURCHES

One Going on at Fifteenth Street Christian, Two to Start Next Week.

NOTED PREACHER HERE

Three revivals will be going full blast next week in Washington churches — at Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church, at Fifteenth Street Christian Church and at Brightwood Park Methodist Episcopal Church. At only one will services be under the direction of visitors, but they are among the most noted evangelists in America and are known as the "Gospel Crusaders."

At Petworth Methodist Church Dr. George W. Cooke, of Wilmington, Del., who has the distinction of having preached and sung his way around the world, will sing and preach. At one time he was associated with the late Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, a Presbyterian evangelist of great power. He is a Methodist minister, a member of the Genesee Conference in New York State.

Plays Several Instruments.

Believing in the ministry of music, Dr. Cooke perfected himself in that art. A graduate of a conservatory of music, he plays the piano, the trombone and the English aeolo. At every service he appears as musician and prophet.

Assisting Dr. Cooke is the Rev. Harold Vignuelle, his song leader and musical director. He not only leads the singing but also is a barytone soloist. Songs composed and compiled by Dr. Cooke are sung.

The Gospel Crusaders will take charge tomorrow night and hold forth every night and twice on Sundays for three weeks, the duration of the revival.

Dr. Cooke is no stranger to Washington, having conducted revivals at Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church and at Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church. He has assisted Dr. E. L. Wood, pastor of Petworth Church, in revivals at Martinsburg, W. Va.

During their stay at Washington, Dr. Cooke and Mr. Vignuelle will broadcast every morning at 11:30 over Station WJSV.

The Rev. Walter Smith to Preach.

A revival is going on at Fifteenth Street Christian Church, Fifteenth street and Kentucky avenue southeast, where the Rev. Walter F. Smith, for 25 years pastor of Park View Christian Church, is preaching every night except Saturday.

Special music is provided at the services by an independent male quartet, under the direction of Frank Cook. The quartet is heard often over the radio. Soloists are assisting in the music, which is led by the pastor, Dr. S. Read McAlpin.

The Rev. W. M. Michael Preaching.

Following a time-honored Methodist custom, a two-week revival will begin tomorrow at Brightwood Park Methodist Episcopal Church. The pastor, the Rev. Walter M. Michael, will be the preacher.

He will be assisted by H. Lee Smith, who will lead the singing.

Friday evening the young people will have charge of the services. Gorgon Burnes is to be the speaker. The choir is led by Mr. Smith.

St. Andrew Brotherhood To Hear Rev. Dr. Powell

The Rev. Dr. Noble C. Powell, chaplain of the University of Virginia and rector-elect of Emmanuel Parish in Baltimore, has accepted the invitation of the Potomac Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew to deliver the principal address at the breakfast which is to follow the Corporate Communion of that organization at Washington Cathedral on Monday morning, February 23.

Bishop James E. Freeman will be the celebrant at the communion service in the Bethlehem Chapel and will make a brief address from the chancel to the senior and junior members of the brotherhood.

Two Visiting Ministers Will Deliver Sermons

Years ago a young Disciples minister was beginning his life work at Angola, Ind., the seat of the Tri-State Normal College. Seven miles away, at Freemont, a young Methodist preacher was getting his start on a four-point Methodist circuit.

One went West and one went East. Now they are both guest preachers in two of the leading churches here. Dr. Charles S. Medbury will be at the National City Christian Church and Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, who changed from the Methodist Church to the Congregational while in Boston, will be guest preacher in the First Congregational Church.

Choir Will Sing Sealy Offertory at Epiphany

A special feature of the morning prayer service at the Church of the Epiphany Sunday will be the choir's rendition of an offertory anthem written by Frank L. Sealy, warden of the American Guild of Organists, and dedicated to the rector, the Rev. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips. The anthem is given under direction of Adolph Torovsky, church organist, and a member of the A. A. G. O.

At the evening prayer a festival anthem, "Hail Gladdening Light," by George C. Martin, an English composer, will be sung by the choir.

Episcopal Missionary To Preach in Capital

The Rev. Claude L. Pickens, jr., a missionary of the Episcopal Church in the District of Hankow, China, will be the preacher at the morning service in St. Margaret's Church, tomorrow, and in the evening he will preach in Emmanuel Church, Anacostia Parish, the Rev. L. B. Franck, rector. On Wednesday he will also address the Woman's Auxiliary of Takoma Park, Trinity Church, the Rev. J. Cobb, rector.

The subject of Mr. Pickens' talks on all of these occasions, will be his work in the diocese of Hankow. He is a native of Alexandria, Va.

Former Dean at Yale To Be Lenten Speaker

The noonday Lenten services in Washington this year will be held in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church commencing March 9. They will continue for four weeks, the speakers being:

Dr. Charles R. Brown, former dean of Yale Divinity School; Dr. C. C. Rasmussen, pastor of Luther Place Church in Washington; Dr. J. R. Sizoo, pastor of New York Avenue Church; and Bishop William F. McDowell of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

EVANGELIST

DR. GEORGE W. COOKE, Gospel Crusader, who will conduct a three weeks' revival at Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church.

50 New Members To Be Received

Luther Place Memorial's Additions Since April Will Reach 360.

Tomorrow will be a big day at Luther Place Memorial Church. Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen will receive about 50 members into the church, bringing the total to 360 he has welcomed since last April.

Dr. Gould Wickey, executive secretary of the board of education of the United Lutheran Church, will assist at a Holy Communion service to follow.

Tuesday evening Dr. and Mrs. Rasmussen will give a good fellowship party to the members of the congregation. This affair takes place at the parsonage.

The Sunday school is undertaking a canvass of the blocks adjacent to the church to determine the number of children and young people who have no Sunday school affiliations.

CHURCHMEN PLAN TO GREET DR. KERR

NEW OFFICERS CHOSEN

An institution in which the late Dr. Wallace Radcliffe took great interest is the Presbyterian Alliance. He was for years its president.

When the association was instituted it was a sort of church extension society. As such it aided Presbyterian churches in this community, raising funds for them—helping them and others to lift debts.

After a while this work of the alliance was taken over by the General Board of Church Extension of the church, and it then became the premier social organization of the Presbyterians of Washington. Its one great yearly attraction was entertaining the moderator of the General Assembly.

Dr. Radcliffe, who for a generation was pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, continued as president of the alliance until his death last year.

On Tuesday afternoon of this week the alliance reorganized by electing Dr. John C. Palmer, minister of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church and a life-long friend of Dr. Radcliffe, president.

The other officers chosen are as follows: Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Convenant-First Presbyterian Church, first vice president; William Terrell, an elder in the Gunton Temple Presbyterian Church, second vice president; William A. Snell, an elder in the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, treasurer, and George Francis Williams, an elder in the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, secretary.

Gunton Temple invited the alliance to give the annual reception to the moderator there. So the Presbyterians of Washington and vicinity will meet Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr, of Pittsburgh, in a reception there March 23. Plans for the reception are in the hands of Dr. Palmer. Dr. Kerr will speak. He is regarded as one of the most eloquent ministers in America.

CAPITAL HEBREWS PLAN CELEBRATION

Simon to Lead Congregation to Mark Chartered Founding in 1860.

TO BEGIN NEXT FRIDAY

Seventy-one years ago the first Hebrew Congregation in Washington was organized. That was in 1860, just one year before the Nation was torn in two by a fratricidal war. For several years prior to that the fact that the Jews were going to organize a society here was an item of news that ran prominently in the papers.

It took an act of Congress to effect this. Such men as Senator Lewis Cass of Michigan and others equally as prominent discussed the matter in the Senate before President Lincoln was elected, and gave it their indorsement and their support.

A little handful of Jews, sturdy pioneers they were, got up a petition which they presented to Congress, asking for a charter, and it was on that foundation that the Washington Hebrew Congregation was built. Perhaps no other church in Washington has such a history.

Not One Alive Today.

There isn't a single member of that little group now alive, and only a few of their sons and daughters are yet living. Those few, however, and their children, form the backbone of this congregation, and they are going to celebrate, with appropriate exercises, the founding of their congregation and commemorate the memory of its founders.

From that little handful of pious Jews the congregation has grown until it now numbers 611 members. It is strong in numbers, in financial resources, i nachievement, and in loyalty to its faith.

Rabbi Here 27 Years.

Dr. Abram Simon, the rabbi of this congregation, who is now entering his twenty-seventh year with them, will open the anniversary celebration with a sermon on Friday night, February 6, on the subject, "Our Congregation and Its Place in American Reform Judaism." On Sunday evening following and on the next Friday evening a fellowship service will be held, at which leading ministers of the community will bring their congratulatory messages.

March 3 will be dedicated to the social pleasures of the United Congregation, and the societies of the Congregation will arrange their programs to fit into the general celebration.

WRITES BOOKS

DR. SAMUEL JUDSON PORTER, pastor of the First Baptist Church, who has a new book out.

Pastor Publishes Another Volume

Dr. S. Judson Porter's New Book Also Coming Out in Portuguese.

Dr. Samuel Judson Porter, pastor of the First Baptist Church, has started his seventh year in that pastorate by announcing the publication of a new book entitled, "The Diamond Shield," which is an interpretation of the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians.

Dr. Porter's book is being translated into Portuguese. It will be published at Rio de Janeiro for use as a devotional text book in evangelical schools and colleges, Sunday schools and societies of Brazil.

Dr. Porter was for years a missionary in Brazil. Mrs. Herbert Lee Kokernot, of San Antonio, Tex., provided the funds to pay for the Portuguese edition of the book. The translator, a native of Brazil, refused to accept pay for his services. Dr. Porter has written seven other books.

Sacred Heart Choir Gives Concert Sunday

Plans have been completed for the concert to be given by the Sacred Heart Choir tomorrow night, at the Mayflower Hotel. Arrangements are in charge of a large committee, which includes Miss Marie McDonald, Miss Bessie Dodson, Miss Patrice Rice and Mrs. Philip Vernier.

A large and representative group of patronesses is sponsoring this event. Following the concert there will be dancing, scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock.

MEMBERS INVITED TO DISCUSS TEXTS

Pastor Will Try Experiment of Having Comments Made From Pews.

TEST IS BEING WATCHED

Did you ever hear of a congregation doing the preaching — something new under the sun. Many preachers put their ears to the ground to find out what their people want to hear from the pulpit, and conform their sermons to the sounds they thus pick up.

There is another way in which the congregation can do the preaching, and that way will be tried tomorrow night at Epiphany Chapel, Sixteenth and U streets. The chapel is part of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, which is building a fourteenth century Gothic cathedral on Connecticut avenue. When the edifice is completed, old St. Paul's and Epiphany Chapel will be disposed of.

The evening service is a great problem to most city churches nowadays and pastors are trying various expedients to keep them going. Most of Washington's churches do keep open, but many confine themselves to one service on Sunday.

Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's, will announce a text tomorrow evening. Then he will invite members of his congregation to express their views on the words of Holy Writ he has read.

The result will be awaited with interest by the pastor. The plan will enable members of the congregation to give the pastor points on theology and preaching. Whether the experiment will revolutionize church services by having the pew preach to the pulpit, and perhaps the congregations sing to the choir, remains to be seen.

Aiding Red Cross To Be Discussed

Dr. McCartney's Foreword Emphasizes "Volunteer Organized Funds."

Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, will draw a long bow for the American Red Cross in his sermon tomorrow morning. The bulletin from the church announcing the theme says:

"Altogether apart from any political issue that may be drawn between the responsibilities of the Federal Government and the Red Cross, Dr. McCartney will build his sermon about the lamentable situation that confronts the country in terms of human suffering and want. The traditions of the Red Cross, reaching back through a half century, are among the most cherished nobilities of the American people.

"Whatever the Government may do, we must not allow its action to cut off the nerve of volunteer, organized funds to bind up the wounds of society and relieve suffering and woe wherever found."

Archbishop Aims At More Schools

Baltimore Prelate Forms Association in Interest of Education.

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (A. P.)—A new society, to be known as the Catholic School Association, is being organized by Archbishop Michael J. Curley in the archdiocese of Baltimore. The association has for its objective the enrollment of thousands of Catholics in the archdiocese in the work of Catholic education.

The members will sponsor the foundation of more Catholic High School scholarships for boys and girls.

Through the archbishop's efforts, a high school where girls may receive an education at nominal cost has been established. He plans to do something along the same lines for the boys of the archdiocese.

Sentence Sermons

By The REV. GERHARD E. LENSKI
(Pastor of Grace Lutheran Church)

Builders

"A wise man built his house upon a rock." Matthew 7:24.

THERE is no more helpful truth that can overshadow our often careless and purposeless living than this truth that comes to us from the lips of the Master that we are building the house of character, not merely for today and tomorrow, but for all the years that are yet to be. As many other truths can not do, this truth can sober us into serious thinking and save us from sin and selfishness.

"The man who builds a house to last a lifetime builds differently from the man who builds for a single year. The man who builds a life to last forever builds differently from the man who builds but for a generation." He builds differently! He must of a necessity build better! Therein lies the merit of the far thought that serves the present and, at the same time, scans the horizon of the future.

The teachings of religion are indispensible for those who build for eternity. They restrain a man from hiding a false and weak foundation behind an attractive exterior. They tell a man that each act becomes woven into the very fabric of his being, to be a part of his soul forever, and that, therefore, he ought to make that act praiseworthy and good.

Dr. Medbury Preaches At National Tomorrow

Dr. Charles S. Medbury, of Des Moines, Iowa, will again occupy the pulpit of the National City Christian Church tomorrow. Announcement of Dr. Medbury's presence in this pulpit last Sunday attracted wide attention among the Disciples of Christ in Washington. This was due not only to his national reputation as an orator, lecturer and author, but also to the local standing which he has achieved in his home town of Des Moines.

In addition to Dr. Medbury's duties as pastor of a church of nearly 3,000, and chaplin of Drake University, which numbers several thousand students on its rolls, he has for the past six years been a member of the board of directors of the Public Welfare Bureau and has also for several years been a member of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of Des Moines.

Petworth M. E. Gaining Ground

Young Folk Prove Stimulus to Services and Pledge Devotion to Ideals.

The service at Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church last Sunday evening showed further gains in attendance. A chorus of 125 young folk led the congregation in singing.

Visitors came from widely scattered sections of the city, some from outside the city.

The congregation filled the main auditorium and made necessary the opening of the other rooms. After the sermon most of the young people crowded about the altar, pledging themselves to a higher service.

Mr. Depp announces that at the Sunday evening services in February he will devote his sermons to "Great Hymns of the Church," one hymn to be selected by the congregation for each evening.

The gospel song service will be conducted by Dr. Harold M. Dudley during the first fifteen minutes of the hour. A solo will be given by Stanley Wolfsthal, flutist, who will be accompanied by Louis Potter, organist. The Scripture lesson will be read by R. PHYSICIANS AND LIQUOR.

The report of the Wickersham Commission aroused such a furore over revision of the eighteenth amendment that little attention has been given to its recommendations for improvement of the present system. In general the commission favors measures tending to remove the friction and resentment which have always accompanied enforcement of the antiliquor laws. Most of its suggestions for tightening up enforcement are aimed against the sources of liquor supplies.

The commission refused to sanction greater leniency in searches and seizures. It believes that a law penalizing the purchaser of intoxicants would only complicate enforcement problems. The country can't hope to stop the liquor traffic by molesting petty violators. Certainly the public will agree with this attitude.

One important suggestion for removal of irritation and resentment is that arbitrary restrictions on physicians be abolished. Prohibition was enacted to prevent the use of liquor as a beverage, not as a medicine. The manner in which Congress has hedged the medical profession with restrictions is absurd, and contrary to the eighteenth amendment. The commission asks that the amount of liquor a doctor may prescribe for a patient be left to his discretion. Congress is also asked to abolish the requirement under which the illness for which liquor is issued must be stated for a public file. The medical profession is for the most part composed of responsible, law-abiding citizens. Certainly they can be trusted to prescribe liquor as medicine and not as a beverage. Those who abuse this trust can be prosecuted as violators of law.

Senator Copeland, himself a physician, has introduced a bill to remove this restriction. This can be considered quite aside from the merits of the squabble over revision of the eighteenth amendment. Elimination of the absurdities, the red tape, and the unreasonable features of prohibition enforcement would be an accomplishment, regardless of the fate of the amendment.

THE ROOT FORMULA.

The New York World thus describes the Root formula, by which it is proposed to nullify the Senate's reservation prohibiting the League of Nations and its court from meddling in American questions:

> The problem has been solved by providing that the United States is to be notified when the court receives any request for an advisory opinion; that an exchange of views is then to take place "as to whether an interest of the United States is affected;" that the United States may file a protest, if it wishes, against consideration of the request by the court; and that in the extremely unlikely event that this protest is not heeded, the United States may withdraw from the court "without any imputation of unfriendliness or unwillingness to cooperate generally for peace and good will."

This is the Root formula.

That is, the League of Nations says to the United States: "We propose to have our court pass its opinion on American questions, with or without your consent, and if you don't like it you are permitted to clear out."

GOVERNMENT BY BLOCS.

The immediate cause of the downfall of the Theodore Steeg government in France was a vote taken on a resolution denouncing "speculative maneuvers equally harmful to farmers and consumers resulting from advance publicity" on the government's plans to fix the price of wheat at about $1.86 a bushel. By a majority of ten votes, generally believed to be those of the Communist bloc, the resolution was sustained, whereupon M. Steeg presented the resignation of his cabinet.

The defeat of the Steeg government comes close on the heels of the defeat of the Ramsay MacDonald government on a trivial question. Although Mr. MacDonald did not take his defeat as a signal for his resignation, as did M. Steeg, both incidents are illuminative of the conditions that exist in European legislative bodies. The French chamber is composed of so many blocs that the government, of necessity, has to be of a coalition nature. No British party has a clear-cut majority in Parliament. Coalition governments are always at the mercy of the minority.

France will have difficulty in organizing a new government. Economic and parliamentary conditions being what they are, no statesman relishes the prospect of having the responsibility of government placed in his hands. The people generally expect the government to work miracles with respect to relieving a business depression or ameliorating unemployment distress. It is because no one else is willing to take over the responsibility of conducting the British government at this particular time that Ramsay MacDonald has been able to retain office these many months. It is because French statesmen will hesitate to make themselves a target that a new French government will not be easily organized.

MAINTENANCE OF WAGES.

Industry and labor are agreed, at least in theory, that any movement to reduce wages would have an adverse effect upon the economic situation. The attitude of labor was ably discussed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in an address before the Anthracite Club in New York. The high wage system, which makes quantity production possible, he says, has been "viciously and ruthlessly attacked and battered down." The result has been, he contends, to throw the industrial system into reverse gear, thus undoing all that has been accomplished through the payment of high wages.

Owen D. Young is the most recent spokesman on this subject for the industrialists. In a current magazine article he declares that unemployment must be solved by industry as a matter of self-interest as well as a duty. Economic society, he says, owes the faithful and efficient worker three things; namely, "the highest possible wage, security of employment and provision for the days of retirement. The economic necessity for maintaining high wages has come to be rather generally recognized," he says. "We must strive for a wage as far beyond the old 'subsistence wage' level of other countries as our standard of living is beyond the standards of earlier centuries."

With outstanding leaders of both industry and labor in accord on this subject there is no occasion for wage reductions at this time. Some employers who have maintained their former wage scales have found their usual profits decreasing. That was to be expected in view of slack business conditions. What can be done about it? If those employers insist on transferring the loss to wage earners they can expect the business depression to continue indefinitely. Every employer realizes that wages must be maintained if business is to return to normal. A few try to take advantage of the situation by cutting wages in their own plants and hoping that everywhere else wages and consuming power will be maintained. If that were the general attitude, industrial chaos would result.

For the most part American industry is committed to a far-sighted policy. No one believes that the country has seen its last days of prosperity. The wise executive helps all industry by maintaining wages so as to insure greater earnings in the future. Industry has reached a stage of development where it can not prosper without giving the working man his just share of corporate earnings. This fact is the strongest argument in favor of high wages. Recognition of this fact by leading industrialists as well as by labor is the most important step that has been taken toward economic stabilization.

MERCHANT AIRSHIPS.

This modern machine age is characterized by an astonishing advance in the means of communication and transportation. Nowhere is the application of scientific research more conspicuous than in the utilization of the air as a medium for shortening distances. The Germans originated and developed the Zeppelin. Beginning after the war the United States effectively transplanted the art to this country, and under the leadership of the Navy has established an airship building industry, reserves of helium gas, and skilled pilots and navigators. The Government program of airship development has been consistently carried forward, until today this new industry is ready to undertake the establishment of commercial airship lines from the Pacific Coast to the Far East, and from the Atlantic Coast to Europe whenever the necessary basic legislation is enacted. It will require several years after the passage of such legislation before airships and terminals for this service can be constructed.

Hearings on the McNary-Parker merchant airship bill, scheduled for next week before the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce, are expected to disclose details of how American commercial and financial interests propose to undertake transoceanic service by airships as the culmination of the Government's development program of the past ten years.

The airship art has reached the point where foreign nations, notably Germany, are preparing to pioneer what promises to become a new and revolutionary method of overseas transportation. The German Zeppelin Co., in cooperation with the Hamburg-American Steamship Line, is already building a new and larger Zeppelin and terminal. American pioneers should be accorded as opportunity to enter this new field on a parity with those of any foreign country.

COUNSELS OF GOOD HEALTH.

January always witnesses a marked increase in the number of respiratory diseases, and this January is no exception. In Washington, particularly, the Health Office, school officials and those supervising the well-being of groups of employes are of the opinion that the present outbreak is no more than "seasonal." Nevertheless, the public should read carefully and adopt as its daily routine the measures for the preservation of health recommended by physicians.

Commander Calver, physician of the House of Representatives, counsels the public to get plenty of fresh air; to avoid crowded places; to avoid excessive fatigue and to go home, get to bed and call a physician at the first signs of illness. Surgeon General Cumming publishes a more extensive list of "public precautions and personal hygiene practices upon which the prevention of influenza depends." He counsels against use of any so-called cure; advises eight to ten hours' sleep nightly, a moderate diet, the drinking of at least six to eight glasses of water daily. At the onset of a cold the victim should hurry to bed and call a physician. Both Commander Calver and Dr. Cumming emphasize the fact that the common cold and influenza are not of themselves serious and that, if properly treated at their inception, they can be checked.

One of the first rules of the physician for the preservation of health is "Don't worry!" There is no major influenza epidemic. By taking reasonable precautions most persons will be able to avoid even minor colds.

ALIENS SNEAKING IN AS SAILORS.

Not long ago the Senate unanimously passed the King bill, providing for the deportation of aliens who smuggle themselves into the United States as seamen. That was the second time the measure had passed the Senate without opposition, yet it is being held up on a motion for reconsideration.

In the meantime alien seamen continue to sneak into the United States, depriving Americans of jobs on sea and on land. It is estimated that 40,000 to 50,000 aliens come to the United States as seamen and remain here unlawfully. How can Congress fail to consider this measure when it is giving attention of bills to halt legitimate immigration during the depression?

Senator King made an effort to bring his bill up on Thursday, but Senator Bingham objected. The senator from Connecticut is apparently alone in his opposition to this measure. Since it has the unanimous approval of the committee on immigration and has twice passed the Senate, it is inconceivable that Mr. Bingham can alter that decision. But the delay is costly to American labor, and encourages the smuggling of aliens.

Senator King has served notice that he will bring the subject before the Senate again on Monday. The Senate should dispose of it, so that it may be acted on by the House before the close of the present session.

THE CYCLE OF MATTER

By GEORGE WILTON FIELD.

In the effort to relieve present distress arising from local lack of water it is both good humanity, good politics and good business to combine present relief with preparations for future immunity from similar conditions. The program for immediate relief is obvious and simple. So is insurance for future relative immunity when certain known basal causes shall be remedied.

Drought is obviously caused by faulty distribution of water. By some the fault is ascribed to an "all-wise but unscrupulous Providence." That the cycle is one of nature's "popular" methods of operation and of progress has been accepted and often utilized to human advantage. Some cycles must be accepted "as is," others can be improved by engineering, business, political methods and devices. If these "improvements" are not in sufficient conformity to nature's laws a new vicious cycle may be developed. With such a one we are now confronted in the problem involved in floods and droughts. Floods and droughts are often both man-made and man controlled. The complete remedy must carry with it a guarantee that the causes which brought the drought and floods shall be eliminated, so far as may be humanly possible.

The present drought brings the Nation face to face with the effects of a biological depression. The cause of the depression is ascribed to the interruption of the chain of causal conditions which results in interference with the biologic function of water. This chain is water, crops, money, business, happiness, optimism, progress.

The economic significance of utilizing the force of gravity in the cycle, evaporation and precipitation, of water by converting this into power and navigation has been long recognized. But we have too long ignored the utilization of the biologic function of water in the production of food. It does not serve to plant alternate rows of onions and potatoes in your garden in the expectation that the onions will force enough water from the eyes of the potatoes to provide the water necessary for growing the crops, or to expect to keep a national supply of wild life without water. Yet for many farmers that is the only chance.

It has, in many instances, proved to be an economic fallacy to modify the land to fit a specialized, "fashionable" crop, rather than to attempt to ascertain closely for what crop the land and water are best suited, and then make the possible improvements to increase the biologic yield.

We have transformed by this mistaken practice the water in the natural reservoirs—the soil and shallow lakes of the Dakotas, Minnesota and the rest of the outlying Mississippi watershed, to the stem of the Mississippi River from Cairo to the Gulf. As a "reservoir out of place" this main river has become an uncontrollable liability in place of an asset. The neglect of utilizing broadly the biologic function of water has led to overemphasizing "dirt farming" and neglecting "water farming." Thus we have missed much of the practical business value of water not otherwise in use or invested in the biologic cycle of matter.

But we are still able to bank upon the natural cycle. Water plus mineral substances and inorganic matter becomes converted into plants and plants into animals. This organic matter breaks down into minerals. The cycle is repeated continuously. Biologists designate this natural phenomenon as the Cycle of Matter. The links in this endless chain are water, minerals, plants, snails and mussels, worms and insects, oysters or minnows, frogs, fish, birds, man, water, minerals.

These cycles can be interrupted by man at any point and in varied ways. He may kill off by poisons, or by mineral oils, both the microscopic and larger plants and animals; i. e., oysters, clams and pearl mussels, even wild fowls. He may sell or eat too many of the adults, and so prevent the production of eggs (lobsters, crabs and wild fowl). He may change the physical conditions so that the food can no longer be produced. We have been vastly misled by the rapidity of financial returns on money invested in water for power and for navigation, and even in water in stocks.

The biologist now points out that money, as money, is valueless if the sources of life and living are destroyed by ignoring the biologic cycle of matter. The biologist further emphasizes the fact that the biologic uses of water do not interfere with those other better known and understood uses upon which the cash return is quicker.

The present remedy for restoration of farm property is the biologic utilization of water, repairing the break in the cycle of matter, and thereby developing at the same time the prevention of losses by erosion of the most productive soil. As incidental and preventable wastage, floods carry these minerals, such as nitrates, phosphates, sulphates and cashonates to the ocean, where they are not needed. Floods and even very ordinary rains carry and misplace material into our waterways and reservoirs, injure public roads and railroad rights of way, necessitating use of money which can be spent to greater ultimate advantage on such a real improvement as putting the water into places and conditions where it shall speed up, rather than interrupt, the biological cycle of matter.

It must appeal to common sense that the natural place for surplus or run-off water, the place where it can be available and do its biologic duty, is when stored in the soil. Here it may stay until called upon during any one or all of the twelve months of any year for such duties as agriculture may properly utilize in developing a national balanced ration, of which cereals, farm and garden vegetables, "fish, flesh, fowl and good red herring," shall be component parts; but not omitting in the biologic cycle those plants and animals which contribute to human food.

SPECTATOR.

Better, I think, it is the storm to face
Than snug and warm beside a window pane
Wait idly till the air is clear again,
Watching the warriors move from place to place.

Fighting the cruel elements that race;
Better I think it is to bear the pain
And share the struggle with its loss or gain
Than sit, a fragile relic in a case.

At times 'tis good to face the winds that blow,
To bend the head and battle with the storm.
To feel against the cheek the sleet and snow.
There is no thrill in being safe and warm.
'Tis better far to brave the gale than sit
Safe-sheltered at the window, watching it.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE—Some years ago, when Ed Boyd lived here in town and kept my car in repair, I used to watch him at his labors. He smoked an occasional cigar, chewing it meanwhile until one end resembled a mop, and when it began to interfere with his work he would look about for a temporary parking place.

His work bench was black with the accumulated oil of many years, but usually it offered the only level space within reach. Ed placed his cigar carefully on the edge of it, the fire end projecting into space and the other—the end that soon would return to his mouth—resting in the oil and steel filings and grease.

That habit of his sticks in my memory because it was so typically American.

We have more bath tubs and use more tooth brushes and soap than any other people in the world, and we spend untold millions for patent germ killers to gargle or spray or squirt, but we develop some careless habit that would discount all of our precautions if germs were as dangerous as we think they are.

People who shudder at the thought of drinking from the same glass do not hesitate to drink from the same bottle, and those who are afraid of a used towel seem to think some mysterious process of nature sterilizes a public comb.

They remind me of the little boy who went to school without brushing his teeth and explained to his teacher: "The first bell rung before it was my turn to use the brush."

There are a number of unclean practices that can't be avoided. Men who live in the sticks and don't shave themselves must submit to unsterilized razors, and those who are too poor to have all their garments made to measure must try on hats and various articles of clothing that others have tried and will try.

There is one unclean custom that can be ended, however, if people will learn that cleanliness ranks above generosity. It's the custom of wearing other people's clothes.

Men seldom offend, unless they're invited to a wedding and haven't a dress suit, and women do little of it except in communities where neighbors are intimate enough to drop in without knocking, but I understand the custom is epidemic at colleges.

I hope you won't catch it. The other girl may be "so glad to let you have it," but deep in her heart she resents having to lend her clothes.

There are few things more vulgar than borrowed finery, and wearing another's garments is but one degree more decent than chewing the other kid's gum at recess. Love, DAD.

PRO AND CON

Hands Off Reapportionment.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

In one way or another—and all of them demagogic and undesirable—it has been attempted to tamper with the scheme for national legislative reapportionment approved by Congress before the 1930 census. Representatives of States that are to lose one or more seats in the House of Representatives are naturally concerned about the possible loss to their States, and perhaps to themselves, of places at Washington.

They joined in approving the reapportionment act when it was passed, but that was before the census was taken. Now it is known whom it may hit, and those who are likely to be chopped off are very actively searching for ways to keep their States fully represented on the Federal pay roll. They are strongly supported by moral reform bodies—which advocate all sorts of dodges to cheat the larger States, with their liberal metropolitan population, of just representation.

Price of Bread.

Mankato Free Press.

If a combination exists by which the price of bread is kept unduly high, in times such as these, that high price undoubtedly has a direct effect on the amount of bread that is consumed. Certainly the farmer is getting little enough for his wheat. If the price of bread is brought down to a corresponding level, it might be that increased consumption would be sufficiently to materially reduce the surplus wheat now held in this country. Certainly a wider use of wheat products is one of the Nation's needs to aid the agricultural problem—and certainly an unduly high price for bread is not going to bring us any nearer solution of that problem.

Sackcloth and Ashes.

Atlanta Constitution.

In the event an extra session of Congress is forced, it will be up to President Hoover to proclaim for the people a day of humiliation, fasting and prayer. That usually accompanies great calamities.

Look Out, Southern Senators.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There is undoubtedly an increasing feeling in the Senate that it should not continue blindly to follow Mr. Nye's foolish leadership. This has been intensified by his assumption of the role of prosecutor in the case of Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania. Chairman Nye has not only failed to produce a shadow of evidence of any wrongful expenditures. He has been unable to show anything more than the modest outlay which Senator Davis reports as expended in his behalf.

Ever since this committee was appointed the Southern Democratic senators have realized that its blanket authorization gives it power to investigate the general conduct of primaries in Southern States. And they know that the manner in which they have nullified the fifteenth amendment will not bear such official scrutiny.

At the time the Baltimore Sun warned the Southern Democrats that in joining with the Republican insurgents to give this committee such powers they might "eventually be the victims of their own political strategy," and asked: "Are their own titles to senatorial seats beyond question?"

Tip to the Ducks.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Testimony of Gen. Pershing and Gen. Wood Gives Warning Against Deadly Cost of Neglect of National Training.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Were it necessary to lay emphasis on the need for a decent respect for preparedness by the Nation it is furnished by two public men from personal experiences, viz: The life story of Gen. Leonard Wood and the daily chapter from the forthcoming book by Gen. John J. Pershing. Before this Nation unfurled its flag in the Great War those in authority seemed determined to learn nothing from the experiences of the past, preferring to remain unprotected and unprepared, despite the disturbance in Europe and the certainty that we would be dragged in sooner or later. When Congress finally declared that "a state of war exists," there were not enough officers in army or navy to train the men who would be in the service—volunteers or by draft. Worse than that, if every man in the service were employed to drill the new men there was still such a shortage that officers from England and France were called on to assist.

Insurance never causes a building to burn nor does a policy on one's life put him in his casket, but it does provide for an emergency that may arise at any moment, the lack of which would be disastrous; in other words, it is worth-while preparedness.

The warning of Gen. Pershing against an unconcerned somnolence regarding the future is pertinent now and should not fall on deaf ears. How easily one can visualize the difference in the outcome had there been a million men in the country who had spent a few weeks in camp at the training that makes for good citizenship as well as field service when an army was needed. We were at least a year too late, anyhow, and then some months passed before even Gen. Pershing and his staff could be sent, with no troops to go along. Guns and ammunition of all sorts must be manufactured, so that most of the troops had to go so empty handed that official France jested at us.

The cost of summer camps to train ten times as many men as can now be handled would be the cheapest kind of insurance that the Nation can provide, and more, the course of instruction given is not provided elsewhere, which transfers the "awkward squad" into a citizenship that is real, because they there learn obedience, the value of teamwork, respect for their superiors, their fellows and themselves and the majesty of law.

Men from every walk of life should go to these camps, and after the training of a few—possibly three—summers there would be in private life a higher type of citizenship, with a better grasp on what our Government stands for and, in an emergency, which in the past has fallen upon us, unprepared, we would be able to deal with it promptly and, therefore, with less of loss of life and less cost in all other ways to the Nation.

Shall we wake up to our opportunity or shall we permit a parsimonious Congress to prevent preparedness while it can be effected at the lowest possible expense?

ARTHUR GIBSON MORSE.

Former Senator Thomas Suggests a Commission to Find Out What Wickersham Report Means.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President's National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, appointed over twenty months ago, has finally made a report somewhat more ponderous than the baptismal name of its author. Notwithstanding an unduly long period of gestation, its contents bear many indications of a premature delivery. Complete unanimity of its members is wanting even in its final recommendations, while disagreement in fundamentals is perhaps its most prominent feature. The President was the first to dissent from it, and to reaffirm his devotion to a wretched and dying experiment still "noble in motive."

Your paper this morning gave the public a resume of press and personal comment upon the commission's 300-page production, from which it appears that the effusion is agreeable alike to the views of those who advocate and of those who oppose prohibition, but anathema to those sons of Belial, who entertain an unholy antipathy to the eighteenth amendment and clamor for its repeal. My own immature and humble impression is that the great majority of the commissioners modeled their inquiries and conclusions upon the counsel of St. Paul, who advised his co-workers in the vineyard to be all things to all men.

From the vulgar standpoint of expense, it looks as though the public has not received its money's worth. But its loss will not be a total one, provided the President pursues his commendable policy by appointing another fact-finding commission, with instructions to ascertain, if humanly possible, what the Law Enforcement Commission report is all about, but limiting its existence to March 4, 1933, and the volume of its report to 299 pages. Although this would involve more expense, it might prove informative to a high degree, especially as both the former commission and its labors will by that time have passed into the oblivion which has never failed to swiftly enshroud all similar investigations both noble and otherwise. C. S. THOMAS.

McGuffey Readers Needed Today.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a collector of old school readers I now have an immense collection. I find the aim of moral instruction to be supreme in McGuffey. Surely some of the moral reforms in recent years are due in part to the fact that at one time about half of the school children of America were feasting on the good things that Dr. McGuffey had prepared for them.

Many modern readers are frothy by the side of McGuffey. There is little in them worth remembering. Readers of the McGuffey type should be put into our schools for the sake of the life principles they teach.

Sealed Verdict Is Filed In Suit Against Tom Mix

Erie, Pa., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—After deliberating three hours and a quarter, the jury reached a decision in the $325,000 breach of contract suit brought against Tom Mix, circus cowboy and former film star, but the verdict was sealed and will not be opened until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Jury Picked to Try Son Of Tennessee Bishop

New York, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—The jury that is to try James Matthew Maxon, jr., son of the Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Tennessee, on the charge of having beaten aged David Paynter to death in a rooming house fight last April, was completed today.

It will begin to hear the evidence next Tuesday.

Row Over $2 Blamed For Murder and Suicide

Oneida, N. Y., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—An altercation over $2.00 payment for housekeeping services, police said today, led to the killing here of Mrs. Laura J. Manning, 48, and the suicide of her employer, Albert E. Suits, 68, in a hotel at Rome.

Her head crushed in by a hammer and her throat cut, the body of Mrs. Manning was found this morning jammed into a small space under a trap door at Suits' home. Suits slashed his throat in Rome Wednesday.

For two days Charles Manning, State trooper, the woman's son, had searched for her. It was he who found the body. Letters in Mrs. Manning's blouse and a telephone call made Sunday to police gave the grounds for the killing, the officials said.

Sing Sing Convict, Witness, Escapes

Slips Handcuff, Leaps Into Passing Auto and Ruse Gets Him Far.

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Ray Williams, 26, a Sing Sing prisoner, escaped from the custody of guards at noon today after testifying in a murder trial.

Slipping his wrist from a handcuff as he was being placed in a prison car he ran a short distance and leaped into a passing auto. He abandoned the car at Mamaroneck, and started toward New York City on foot.

Charles Palino, driver of the commandeered auto, said Williams held his hand in a coat pocket, jabbed him in the side and said: "I've got a gun; I want you to drive me to New York." At Mamaroneck, Palino said, the convict offered him $500 if he would drive on to New York, but leaped out of the car after a short argument.

Court Sets Blame In Shelling of Ship

Responsibility Is Divided for Loss of 27 Lives Near Brazil.

Hamburg, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—A maritime court investigating the shelling of the Hamburg-American liner Baden in the port of Rio de Janeiro last October today divided the blame between Brazilian revolutionaries ashore and the ship's captain.

Unintelligible signals from the fort at Santa Cruz to the fort at Vigia, verdict said, was responsible for gunners in the latter fort firing directly at the vessel as she sailed for Buenos Aires instead of dropping a warning shot.

The captain, Ernst Rolin, also was held partly to blame because he had not noticed a footnote to his sailing permit instructing him to communicate with Santa Cruz as he passed.

Twenty-seven lives were lost aboard the steamer, including eighteen women and children. Fifty-eight of the passengers and crew were injured.

Wood-Chopping Scheme Would Aid Unemployed

A scheme to provide relatively permanent employment for woodchopers, either by trade or of necessity, was proposed yesterday by the District Committee on Unemployment.

For the last two weeks eighteen formerly unemployed men have been cutting up trees felled in Arlington Cemetery to make way for a new road. Approximately 100 cords of fuel are the result. The committee desires to sell the wood to a local dealer and buy more unchopped wood with the proceeds and thus continue the work indefinitely.

BRIDE LEAVES CITY; UTILITIES GUESSING

Will File Rate Petition, He Says When Board Gives Data He Needs.

TOLD HE HAS ABUNDANCE

Another difference of opinion appeared yesterday between the Public Utilities Commission and its counsel, Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, regarding the electric rate consent decree, although it may have been a game of hide and seek.

Upon returning to his office yesterday Mr. Bride announced that he is ready to follow the instructions of the commission as a "good soldier," despite its refusal to accept his advice, and will file a petition for modification of the decree just as soon as the utilities body furnishes the facts upon which to base the action. Later in the day he left for a week-end trip on the Chesapeake Bay to recuperate from illness induced by overwork.

Meanwhile, when Harleigh H. Hartman, vice chairman and legal member of the commission, was asked when the required data would be provided the corporation counsel, he insisted that Mr. Bride has everything necessary to file the petition.

"He has whatever figures are needed for inclusion in the petition," Mr. Hartman said, "and we will give him what evidence we have after this petition is filed. I can't imagine what else he wants."

Mr. Bride indicated yesterday that the petition would be ready early next week and stated the case "will be prosecuted vigorously and loyally."

Maj. John C. Gotwals, District Engineer Commissioner, who is also a member of the Utilities Commission, yesterday explained his position regarding the consent decree. He said that he wished to retain the Boston sliding scale so that an inducement would be offered to the Potomac Electric Power Co. to operate efficiently.

Rate-making, he declared, is more a matter of engineering than legal principles. While admitting that the rate of return of the power company had been too high under the consent decree, he expressed the belief that the way should be left open to allow higher than normal returns if the company decided to install new and more efficient equipment at any time.

GRANDMOTHER, TWO TOTS ARE RESCUED

Fire Damages Apartment as Neighbors Answer Calls for Help.

SICK CHILDREN SAVED

Neighbors rescued a 70-year-old grandmother, with a broken arm, and two sick children yesterday afternoon when fire broke out in a third-story apartment on R street near Thirteenth street northwest.

The elderly woman, Mrs. Mary Allen, was caring for her two grandchildren, Marjorie, 8 years old, and George, 6 years old, who were ill from colds. The children's mother, Mrs. Ella Tillmore, was away at work.

The fire began in a bedroom from unknown cause. Hearing Mrs. Allen call for help, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chambers, who live in an apartment on the second floor, came and guided the children and their grandmother down the back stairs to safety.

Mr. Chambers fought the blaze with his fire extinguisher, but it got beyond control. Two alarms brought several pieces of apparatus of the Fire Department. Firemen confined the conflagration to the third floor, which was virtually destroyed. The amount of damage was not known.

Capital Schools' Head Goes to Jersey Meeting

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools, left for Atlantic City yesterday to attend the annual meeting of the national committee on Problems and Plans in Education, of which he is a member.

Cortez was not with his estranged wife during her illness from pneumonia which ended in death Wednesday. The actor said he had not been called to her bedside.

Miss Rubens' body will lie in state until noon tomorrow. Christian Science funeral services will be held an hour later at the Little Church of the Flowers in Glendale. $4,000 Bank Loot Saved by Mother

Chicago Robbery Is Solved as Woman Testifies Against Son.

Chicago, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Before the police had time to learn the details of the $4,000 robbery of the West Side National Bank today, the 18-year-old robber, Samuel Cohen, was turned over to them by his mother.

The bank was held up by one man in the usual manner. A police squad was still at the bank learning these details when a white-haired little woman rushed into the police station, threw a shopping bag full of money on a table and said:

"I'm Mrs. Anna Cohen. My boy Sammy—(he hasn't had any work for a long time)—came home just now with a big roll of bills in his hand. He tossed them on the table. He's a good boy. You go on over and get him."

The Saturday Food and Home Economics Page

Appearing Each Week in The Washington Post

RECIPES CONTAINING CITRUS FRUIT JUICE

MANY GIVE SUGGESTIONS

Many women readers of The Washington Post have taken advantage of the opportunity offered in the contest for the best suggestions for this Saturday food page to express their appreciation of the aid this page is proving in their home-making problems.

According to these letters, the homemakers reached in the territory covered by The Washington Post are deeply grateful for the helpful hints given in the selection, purchase and preparation of foodstuffs.

A new note has come into the American woman's attitude toward food. The average housewife has become interested not only in the appearanec of food, but also in the elements contributed by it to the health growth and general welfare of the family. Especially is this true where children are concerned, for it is now established that diet has an important part in the development of the child.

In planning her weekly budget allowance for food, the wise homemaker will do well to study the advertisements in the daily newpapers and take advantage of special sales in foodstuffs, especially nonspoilable items, which can be kept on shelves for an indefinite length of time.

The request made some time ago on this page for favorite recipes by The Post readers has brought many answers. More are wanted, and all received will be published under the names of the senders, provided they wish this.

In studying the question of food, it is interesting to note the important place that oranges, lemons, grapefruit and other citrus fruits have come to occupy in the daily dietary.

Use of grapefruit and oranges in desserts and sweets is limited only by the imagination. Interesting variety may be given some of them by the occasional addition of the smaller citrus fruits, such as the kumquat, the lime and the tangerine, all of which are typical of Florida.

In sherbets and jellies requiring orange juice, select the heavy thin-skinned fruit. Oranges may be of equal size, but the juice content is largest in the heaviest fruit.

In addition to having valuable vitamins and mineral salts, citrus fruits produce in the stomach an antiacid, alkaline effect which makes them highly desirable at the beginning or the end of a meal.

Florida Fudge.

1 large grapefruit.
3 tablespoons sugar.
3 cups brown sugar.
2-3 cup evaporated milk.
2-3 cup water.
3 tablespoons corn sirup.
3 tablespoons butter.
½ cup chopped nuts.

Peel the grapefruit, separate into sections and remove the membrane from each section. Cook chopped sections of grapefruit with the three tablespoons of white sugar until a thick jam is formed. Mix together brown sugar, milk, water, sirup, and butter. Cook over a low fire, stirring constantly. Do not let come to a boil until all the sugar particles are dissolved.

When this mixture forms a soft ball on being tested in cold water, add the grapefruit and cook two minutes longer. Cool until candy begins to thicken and then beat vigorously until almost solid. Add the chopped nuts. Scoop out on buttered platter and flatten with the back of a spoon or a spatula. Mark candy into squares while it is soft.

Grapefruit Sherbet.

1 pint grapefruit juice.
Pulp of 3 grapefruit.
1 cup water.
4 cups sugar.
¼ cup raspberry sirup.

Peel grapefruit and remove membrane from sections. Chop pulp very fine and cover with sugar. After it has stood for two hours drain off sirup. Add to this, orange juice, grapefruit juice, fruit sirup and water and then strain. Freeze until the mixture is just frosted. Serve in cocktail glasses and decorate with mint.

Citrus Jelly.

2 oranges.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
3 bananas.
2 teaspoons gelatin.
2-3 cup sugar.

Boil sugar and ¼ cup of water for five minutes. Mix with granulated gelatin which has been dissolved in ¼ cup cold water. When slightly cooled, add juice of oranges and grapefruit and pulp of bananas, which have been mashed through a sieve. Cool and place in refrigerator. Serve as dessert.

Grapefruit Tapioca.

1 cup grapefruit juice.
1½ cups cooked tapioca.
Pulp of 2 grapefruit.
¾ cup sugar.

Combine cooked tapioca with sugar and juice which have been brought to a boil. When cool pour over small sections of grapefruit from which the membrane has been removed. Chill in refrigerator until set. Garnish with thin small slices of grapefruit.

Orange Frappe.

2 cups orange juice.
2 cups sugar.
2 cups water.
¼ cup grapefruit juice.
1 tablespoon grated orange rind.

Boil sugar and water for ten minutes. When cool, add fruit juice and grated orange rind. Strain and freeze. Serve in frappe glasses. Use whipped cream and small thin slices of orange and grapefruit for garnishing.

Grapefruit With Jelly.

Stuffed grapefruit is coming into favor, either as an occasional sweet or as a dessert. It is simply prepared. Cut a grapefruit in half, and with a sharp knife loosen the pulp from the rind and the separating membranes. Do not core, but remove the seeds. Remove pulp from every third section put in its place a wedge-shaped piece of firm jelly. Use mint, cherry or any color or flavor desired. Decorate with a sprig of fresh mint.

Egg Consumption Affected by Price

Economy and Nutrition Seen in at Least Four a Week.

Nutritionists believe that the use of an egg a day for every growing child and the mother and three or four eggs per week for every other adult could be recommended from the standpoint of economy as well as of good nutrition if the year-round cost of eggs to the consumer is compatible with the limitations of family incomes. In seasons of scarcity and high prices many families can not afford to use eggs freely.

In addressing the National Poultry Congress recently Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling, of the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, discussed the food value of eggs, especially in the diet of young children. Iron and vitamins A and D are particularly abundant in egg yolks, she said.

"It is difficult to measure the egg consumption of the country, because many eggs are consumed by producers or sold at retail directly without going through the trade channels from which statistics are derived. From many records of actual food consumption by farm families it would seem that eggs are not more generally used by farmers than by people at large.

"We'll Have to Go Out for Dinner Tonight"

SHE'S been playing bridge today, and didn't get home to start dinner in time. Now she wants him to take her to "Ye Olde Tea Shoppe" for dinner. And gosh, how he hates it all. All the way home he's been thinking of lowering his aching bones into his favorite chair.

The woman with an Electric Range never has to make that unwelcome suggestion. She always has dinner ready on time . . . and she can spend as many afternoons out as she wishes. Before she leaves, she slips the dinner in the oven, adjusts the dials and forgets it.

For she knows that at the right time the heat will turn on automatically . . . sustained, uniform electric heat . . . and stay on till the dinner's cooked. Then the heat turns off . . . but the dinner stays deliciously warmed in the flavor sealed, insulated oven. Her Electric Range has delivered this woman from kitchen drudgery.

If you haven't discovered the convenience and economy of electric cooking, ask your electrical dealer to explain it!

FRESH VEGETABLES AND FRUITS NEEDED

Department of Agriculture Urges Food Diet Rich in Vitamins.

TESTS USE GUINEA PIGS

Nutrition specialists urge constantly that the diet for all ages, but especially for children, should include an abundance of foods rich in vitamins. There are now recognized, however, at least six independent vitamins. As each has its own function to perform in growth and bodily well-being, it is necessary to know what each one does and what foods supply it. Otherwise a diet might supply some, but not all, of the different vitamins.

For instance, attention is often called to the necessity for vitamin C in the diet. Especially good sources of this vitamin are the citrus fruits (oranges, grapefruit and lemon), raw cabbage and turnips, and tomatoes, raw, cooked or canned. Other foods mentioned by the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is supplying this vitamin are apples, potatoes, raspberries, spinach, sprouted legumes and string beans.

One reason for insistence on supplying plenty of these foods is that the body has only a limited capacity to store vitamin C. Replenishment must go on continually. Another reason is that this vitamin is very easily destroyed by heat and oxidation. If vegetables are cooked too long they may lose their vitamin C. All recent instructions on vegetable cookery stress quick-cooked methods. Canning often destroys vitamin C. In the case of acid foods, like tomatoes, destruction is not so extensive. Tomatoes seem to retain most of their vitamin content either cooked or canned.

On diets deficient but not entirely without vitamin C, children become irritable and lacking in stamina, do not grow normally and are less resistant to infectious diseases. Shortage of vitamin C is thought to be an important factor in the prevalence of tooth decay and of much of the so-called rheumatism in children and adults. When vitamin C is entirely lacking, scurvy develops. This used to happen on long sea voyages before present knowledge of the preventive value of lemons and other portable foods containing vitamin C.

In testing foods for vitamin C in the laboratory, guinea pigs are fed a basal diet complete except for this vitamin, and then given measured amounts of the food in question. If the animal thrives and grows well, the food is probably a good source of vitamin C; if the animal develops symptoms of scurvy—sore, stiff joints, a tendency to hemorrhage, sore gums, loosening of the teeth and fragile bones, the food under test probably is deficient in vitamin C. Similar symptoms are found in human beings whose diet has lacked the foods that supply this important vitamin.

Beef, Ham Gumbo Served in Rice Ring

Characteristic Ingredient Is Okra, Vegetable Famed in Far South.

From the far South comes this recipe for a "gumbo" made with meat and vegetables and served in a mold of flaky hot rice. The characteristic ingredient of all gumbos is the okra, which is obtainable in most markets during the summer months.

1 pint water.
1 quart tomatoes, fresh or canned.
2 tablespoons butter.
2 tablespoons chopped parsley.
1 onion, sliced.
1 green pepper, chopped fine.
½ cup chopped celery.
1 quart okra, cut crosswise.
Bay leaf or celery seed if desired.
Salt and pepper to taste.

Cook the ham and beef until browned in a large heavy skillet, add the water and tomato, cover and simmer until the meat is almost tender. Cook the other vegetables in the melted butter and add to the meat mixture with the okra. Season to taste and simmer uncovered until the okra is tender and the stew has thickened. Serve the gumbo in a rice ring made as follows:

Rice Ring.

1 cup rice.
4 cups water.
1 teaspoon salt.
½ teaspoon onion juice.
2 tablespoons butter.
2 dashes tobasco.

Wash the rice well, and sprinkle it into the rapidly boiling salted water. Cook for about 20 minutes, or until the rice is tender and the water absorbed. Add the seasonings, put the rice into a well-greased ring mold, and pat it down gently. Reheat in the oven, turn onto a round platter, fill the center with the gumbo and serve at once.

Carrots Are Tasteful With Sauce of Butter

Winter carrots may be prepared to make them one of the best-liked vegetables of the rather limited cold-weather list. Some families like their carrots sliced thin and others want them in "shoe strings." The shape makes no difference if you add the good lemon-and-butter sauce with finely minced parsley in it.

8 or 10 medium-sized carrots.
½ teaspoon salt.
¼ cup butter.
1 or 2 tablespoons lemon juice.
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.

Wash and scrape the carrots and cut them in slices, strings, or dibs. Cook in a small quantity of boiling salted water for 10 or 15 minutes, or until tender, drain, add the butter, lemon juice and parsley, and serve at once.

Baked Sweet Potatoes Served With Raisins

6 medium-sized sweet potatoes.
1 tablespoon salt.
½ cup seedless raisins, plumped.
½ cup top milk.
3 tablespoons melted butter.

Wash and cook the potatoes in their skins. When tender, scrape off the skins and mash the potatoes or force through a potato ricer. Mix the milk, melted butter and salt with the potato and beat until light. Pour hot water over the raisins, and let them stand for a few minutes until plumped; then drain and add to the sweet potato. Grease a baking dish and pile the potato lightly into the dish. Put in a medium oven to heat through and brown lightly over the top.

Peanuts Valuable As Food for Child

Mixed With Cream They Are Found Excellent for Lunch Box.

Peanuts are a valuble food to use from time to time in the children's lunch box. Here is a peanut sandwich that has all the nutty flavor and some of the texture of the nuts themselves. Get freshly roasted peanuts and put them through the food chopper, using the medium-fine knife. Do not use the nut knife because it will grind the peanuts so fine that they will be pasty when mixed for the sandwiches. By using the medium-fine knife there will be tiny pieces of the nuts in the sandwich filling.

Mix the ground nuts with just enough cream to moisten them for a sandwich spread. Add salt to season the mixture. Graham or whole-wheat bread is especially good to use for these sandwiches. Butter is not needed since the peanuts themselves are rich in fat and have been moistened with cream. The Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture says that peanuts are also an excellent protein food, especially when combined with wheat. The protein of the wheat and of the peanuts becomes "complete" or "efficient." Such complete protein can be used by the body to special advantage in building and repairing tissues and for supplying energy. Therefore a sandwich made of wheat bread and peanuts fulfills the requirement for a complete protein food.

PROBABLY you have heard a lot about the wonderful new Oriole Gas Ranges; about Oven Insulation and Heat Control.

Perhaps some of your friends were among the 1,400 wise Washington home-owners who, in a recent 30-day period, modernized their kitchen by buying up-to-the-minute gas ranges.

At any rate, a new gas range, delicately enameled in pastel shades, is something you have had in the back of your head for some time past.

But right now is the time to buy when your gas company is offering the Oriole Insulated Range (model 960), with Oven Heat Control, colored in Green and Ivory at a reduction of $45 from its regular price. This includes an allowance for your old stove.

A small down payment and liberal terms will put one in your home. Of course, there is no extra charge for financing.

The main offices of the Washington Gas Light Company and the Georgetown Gas Light Company are open until 5:30 every afternoon, including Saturday. The branches are open until 9:30 in the evening. Drop in at any of our display rooms to choose your model.

By ROBERT D. HEINL

ADMIRERS of the French star, Maurice Chevalier, will have an opportunity to become better acquainted with him when he appears for 26 consecutive Sunday evenings, commencing February 8, over a national network, including WRC.

"I am now a professional radio broadcaster," the comedian declared, breaking into his famous smile. "My plans for the programs are indefinite, but I intend to offer something original that will interest the American people in their homes."

The annual luncheon of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures will be broadcast this afternoon (WMAL, 2 to 4 p. m.). William N. Doak, Secretary of Labor, heads the list of speakers, which includes Claudette Colbert, Tallulah Bankhead, Maurice Chevalier, Charles Ruggles and others.

HAROLD VEO, who directs the orchestra heard during the Wilkins Coffee Hour (WRC, 7:30 p. m.), is showing considerable originality in the arrangement of this half-hour program. Different dance forms are being emphasized each week with the tango, represented by the South American number, "Jalousie" (Jealousy), selected for tonight.

There is always a special arrangement of a favorite number in the latter part of the program. Tonight it will be "Song of the Bayou."

Veo is a violinist, having played under Victor Herbert and Rudolf Friml. He has developed a peculiar style of playing. One of the things he can do is to bring out laughing or sobbing effects on the violin in the more popular numbers he plays.

Frederic William Wile attempts to sign off every one of his weekly political talks with a new way of saying "Good Night." Not long ago he wound up as follows: "And now, sweet dreams and good night." The following week, Wile said: "And now let me wish you all a cordial good night." Next day he got an unsigned telegram from New York reading: "What about the sweet dreams?"

SELECTIONS from representative American composers have been chosen by Rudolf Schramm for the Washington Gas Light Ensemble tonight (WRC, 6:15 p. m.).

A feature tonight will be a solo by Charles Hellinger on the five-string cello, an instrument which he is said to have invented himself after eight years of study by adding an extra E-string. A number, "Aria Vitae," showing the higher range of the instrument, has been written by Rudolf Schramm.

IF those nationally known men and women who participated in the American Red Cross Hour over WRC on Thursday evening, and the broadcasting company, can give their services free, then it ought not to be hard for the rest of the citizens of this country to raise the remainder of the $10,000,000 drought relief fund. The time given by the President of the United States could not have been purchased with money. Had the other participants been paid for their services with money it would have stretched $50,000 to pay the bill. The wire charges and radio time for that hour alone amounted to probably more than $25,000, which the broadcasters paid.

It was one of the greatest programs ever heard on the air. It's cast was so outstanding that those who participated were themselves affected, as shown by the nervousness of "Amos 'n' Andy" and several others.

Doubtless many before never heard the voice of Mary Pickford, who in the earnestness of her appeal made up for the lack of oratorical effort. Mrs. August Belmont, formerly Eleanor Robson, one of the most famous actresses of a few years back, was, in our opinion, one of the most forceful and attractive women speakers yet heard over the air. Although in such fine company, Will Rogers' speech seemed to us one of the best.

The Red Cross appeal was almost a realization of the dream of the late Admiral Bullard, first chairman of the radio commission, that all the radio stations be linked together so that a national S O S could be instantly sent to every city in a time of great emergency.

Dare Interprets the MODE

A Dah-ray idea for improving that normal waistline!

Paris, Jan. 23.

AND now for the gay '90s waistlet! Oh, yes; it's an idea if there ever was one, and a much-needed one, too. * * * needed by all of us who have gone back to corsets or girdles only to find that they push all of the excess baggage right up around the normal waistline * * * just where we don't want it for today's styles.

So what to do with that life saver of grease around one's coy little "normal waistline" when it comes to the form-fitting waistline on our new frock? Let alone that "armful" sensation you just know he has when his arm encircles the place your normal waistline is supposed to be for that slow tango. What to do, what to do!

Well, there are specially constructed corsets for this little phase of a woman's life, which cost umpteen dollars, and at which we look longingly and say * * * "Oh, yes, isn't that nice!" And then there is Dah-ray and her little ideas * * * most of which spring from her very own feminine needs and are worked out for those needs just because she is able to work them out * * * for you.

Thus the "Gay 90s Waistlet," our latest boon to women, illustrated for you. It's a corslet in its own right, but one that is worn tightly around the normal waistline, lacing or buttoning in front or at one side, preferably in front, and worn over one's regular corset or girdle. It is just that extra piece that keeps the excess life saver roll of fat subdued, you know * * * and it's this little waistlet that is wearable and comfortable * * * more so than the long corsets with attached top that is supposed to confine the normal waistline. Because, being an extra garment, there is sufficient play between the girdle and the "waistlet" for grace and comfort.

How's zat for a real idea?

* * * *

And, of course, there wouldn't be a chance of not making you a leaflet telling you how to make it! 'Cause we just had some made for ourselves and were very busy wearing 'em before we dared write and tell you how practical they were. And what a slim waist you have, Mrs. Gary Garrump! The better to show you the new modes, my deah.

So get that stamped, self-addressed envelope ready right this very minute for the leaflet that tells you how to make a "Gay 90s Waistlet," meaning a little corslet to wear over your girdle or corslet, to subdue that extra flesh that your regular girdle pushes up. Send your letter to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the direction for making it and have as slim a waist as any 16-year-old.

Colors can be so cleverly used that they actually lend an effect of beauty where there isn't any. How well do I remember a rather colorless young lady aboard the Ile de France, dressed in a lovely turquoise blue evening gown and wearing turquoise and diamond earrings, who was the magnet of all eyes simply because the color of the gown and the earrings gave her a richness of coloring that made her distinctly attractive. Women with intermediate coloring should always wear a bright color somewhere on the costume—a scarf, or filet, or jewelry. Only women with decided coloring should risk grays and tans and any dull colors.

* * * *

And tomorrow, again, you have Dare's weekly fashion letter. So look for it in the big Sunday Washington Post.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES McDONALD

Frenzied Finance.

DEAR Frances McDonald—Three years ago I met a widower who admitted he was a failure in life. I had made hash of my own life so I became interested in him. He hadn't a cent. Just a good job and no ambition. I had $2,000 equity in a house that needed a lot of repairs. We married with the understanding that he would do all the repairing and I would board a few people to clear the house of a debt. No sooner were we all set than we got a chance to sell and make $4,000. We bought another house, started another set of boarders in an entirely different location and the same thing happened. This time we made $1,500. The money went to his head and nothing would do but we should go to Florida and become millionaires. I refused to budge and believing that things do go in threes, I wanted to buy again, fix up and sell. He was stubborn. Now we are on the verge of separating and he wants half of everything. He claims that his repairs so improved the houses that they were inviting and salable; I claim the $2,000 happens to be $2,000 and besides we did not sell just the houses but a good boarding business as well. We argue till I can not see or think and we get nowhere. Can you see any way that he is entitled to one half when he put in nothing and I put in $2,000? He keeps saying the $2,000 was lost or as good as lost until I met him. And I say he was sunk until he met me.

What do you consider would be a fair thing to do? I will do anything except hand him a thousand dollars of my money. ELLEN

Well, Ellen, if you can not remain in this successful and seemingly fortunate partnership, by all means see a lawyer and let him do all the fighting. But why should you separate just because one wants to go to Florida and the other does not? About half the population of New York City stands equally divided on the same subject at this season every year and a few casualties result. You know, I have a hunch that the reason some people make "hash" of their lives is that they are so ready to fly off and do damage at the least provocation. Try to be a bit calm. Try to see the future. Try to make the present serene. Talk to your husband as you did before you married him. You seem to have succeeded in at least stirring up his ambition, and that is something. See if you can not succeed in convincing him that together you stand and divided you fall. He is not, of course, entitled to your $2,000, but he is probably only trying to force you to agree to go to Florida! In any case, stop the arguing. See a lawyer and let him lay down the law.

But remember, you will both continue to be failures so long as you continue to throw monkey wrenches into the works. It is the folks who keep things nicely oiled and smoothly running that make successes. Think it over—between fights.

YOUR NAME

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, PH.D.

"SIMON GALT" MEANS "OBEDIENT HOG." "BERTHA ALLEN" MEANS "BRIGHT CHEERFUL."

A large number of early nicknames refer to the hair or to the absence of hair. One of the commonest of such English nicknames is "Ball," which is very well represented as a family name in modern directories. It is generally a disguised form of the adjective "bald." However, in some cases it is a shortened form of "Baldwin." "Baldwin" was once a common personal name of Teutonic origin, meaning "bold friend" or "bold protector." Finally, it has been found that in a few cases the family name "Ball" may be traced back to the Middle English and Old French "balle," meaning "bay-colored" or "chestnut." In such cases it was first given as a nickname to describe the color of the hair of the persons who were first so called. The common spellings of this name is in the Hundred Rolls are "Balde," "Bald," and "Balle." This name was taken to Ireland at an early date by an Anglo-Norman family which settled in Dublin and Meath.

The family name "Glass" has come down to us from three quite different sources. In most cases it is derived from the Celtic "glas," meaning "pale," "gray" and "livid," and was first used as a nickname to describe the complexions of the persons who were first so called. According to another Celtic source it means "the stream," and indicates an original place of residence. Finally, it has been found that in a few cases this name is of purely English origin, and means "the glass-maker."

The family name "Fecht" is of German origin. It means "the fighter" and was generally first applied to professional swordsmen or fencers who undertook to fight duels for others in return for money.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me how to rid my yard and house of ants. This year my garden was overrun with them and they must have come into the house. I have so far been unable to get rid of them. ANNIS T. P.

If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to send you the name of a proprietary preparation which will, if you follow directions on container, rid your premises of ants.

Please tell me the best season to transplant a rose of Sharon. MRS. EDWIN F. B.

You can transplant an althea (rose of Sharon) in the early spring or in the fall. Better purchase a burlaped root or, if you are moving it in your garden, lift it with a large ball of soil about its roots. The althea is rather hard to transplant successfully. Keep it well watered after transplanting and mix a generous quantity of well-rotted manure or bonemeal with the soil before planting.

I find it difficult to keep the location of early flowering bulbs marked. I want to plant more and am fearful of disturbing the old ones. Could you suggest a procedure? There is very little money for my garden work and time is limited also, but I am very anxious to have as much of a garden as possible. The soil is very bad, full of dumpings of many years, apparently, and now has a surface of clay, with some spots improved a little with leafmold I have been able to make and some sand. LOUELLA G. P.

The custodian of every garden should have or make a garden plan. On this plan should be located all planted bulbs, tubers or other roots. This is the only way to keep track of your garden family and avoid injuring things which are already in the ground. This plan may be ever so crude and still be serviceable. January is a good time to spread a coating of manure over your beds and borders. I would also save a few coal ashes to use in the early spring to lighten your soil. Peat moss will also improve the condition of your soil. Any landscape architect or seedman will cheerfully advise you as to the quantities you require. Leafmold, when obtainable, is splendid material to improve poor soil.

Please tell me the names of two plants from which these leaves were taken. MRS. M. A. S.

Specimens arrived in such poor condition that it was impossible to identify them.

Please tell me what to do to improve the condition of my climbing roses. They are covered with scale, which at this season is quite visible. MRS. F. M. S.

Spray plants at this time with Bordeaux mixture and again before growth starts in the spring.

Please tell me exactly how to start both Bermuda lilies and tulips in water. I tried three bulbs of each in October and now they are decayed and none of them has sprouted. I planted them exactly as I did my narcissus bulbs. The narcissus have bloomed most beautifully. MRS. HOWARD T. W.

It is not your method that is at fault, but your adapting it to the wrong varieties of bulbs. Easter lilies and tulips demand soil and refuse to grow in water.

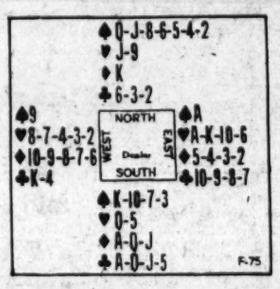
4 tablespoons soft butter.
6 tablspoons fat.

Mix cheese, dressing, salt, onions, catsup and butter. Spread on slices of bread. Arrange sandwich fashion and press together. Cut off crusts and cut each sandwich in half. Heat fat in large frying pan. When hot add sandwichses. Cook quickly until browned on both sides. Serve at once.

WORK ON BRIDGE



(This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.)

Generally, when Declarer has plenty of trumps in his two hands, he should exhaust the adversaries at once to remove the possibility of their getting in a ruff; but there are certain types of hands with which a reason for not leading trumps should be quite apparent. The following hand is an illustration of this principle:

With North the Declarer at two (possibly three) Spades in Auction Bridge or four Spades in Contract Bridge, East would capture the first two tricks with the King and Ace of Hearts. After that he would lead a Club and if South finessed, Declarer would lose that trick and of course must lose the Ace of trumps; so his game would be gone. The finesse might win but would be more apt to lose and it would be useless in any event because South could win trick 3 with the Ace of Clubs and later North would have trumps for South's other three Clubs by playing the hand as follows:

To trick 4, South leads the Ace of Diamonds, on which dummy's King falls; then South cashes his Queen and Jack of Diamonds and gives North an opportunity to discard his two remaining Clubs. That would leave Declarer in position to make an easy game as he would have nothing but trumps left and would lose only the Ace of trumps, in addition to the first two Heart tricks.

If Declarer should lead a trump after refusing the Club finesse, East would win with the Ace, lead another Club and save game; so it is apparent that even with eleven trumps in the two hands it sometimes pays not to lead them immediately.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Destructiveness.

All children go through a phase of what seems like destructiveness to their elders.

This "destructiveness" is, however, only a normal manifestation of the desire to manipulate, experiment and discover. The wish to "take things apart" is one evidence of intelligence.

When it seems that your child is forever breaking things, look over his playthings carefully. See if you have provided him with sufficient material of the kind which satisfies his need for experimental activity.

Certain types of playthings definitely stimulate destructiveness. These are chiefly mechanical toys which permit of only a limited type of play. A toy which works by concealed mechanisms naturally causes the child to wonder how it is made. He takes it apart to satisfy his curiosity or for the simple satisfaction of making things happen. This should be a sign that he needs other kinds of playthings.

Every young child should have large wooden floor blocks with which he may build up and break down. Where living arrangements permit it, they should have sand and clay and a pile of assorted shapes and sizes of wood.

Even in the most cramped quarters there is room for a hammer, a few blocks of wood and a small box of pebbles which the child will enjoy pounding and crushing when the mood to make things happen is upon him. For slightly older children there are structural sets which direct this love for experimentation along proper lines.

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF January 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 3 p. m. to 4:45 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m. The critical hours are from 9:15 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. and from 6 p. m. to 7 p. m.

The planetary aspects of January 24 denote rather unsettled conditions and restlessness. Probably a great deal will be done which, afterward, will have to be undone. In the evening a more normal atmosphere will prevail, propitious for entertaining and social recreation.

The child born on this January 24 will, as time develops its character, be very matter-of-fact. It will never build castles in Spain. It will be self-contained and reserved, capable of a very great affection, but entirely lacking in sentimentality or romanticism.

Although, if you were born on January 24, you have not realized all the hopes of those who knew you in your early youth, you have accomplished a great deal and have largely contributed to the happiness of others. Your judgment is always serene, never biased. Your counsel, when given, is always replete with wisdom and practicability. Consequently, you are the confidant of many, and have helped many a lame dog over the stile.

You only know two roads, the right and the wrong, and you never try, or advise, short cuts or detours. You are always frank, but courteously so. You never say one thing and mean another. In your actions and thoughts you are downright, but not extreme. Your influence over subordinates is one of your most valuable gifts as combined with your organizing ability it makes of you an ideal executive. Your grasp of essentials and the shedding of superfluities, is largely responsible for the success that has attended your efforts in any walk of life.

You are a cheerful companion and a reliable friend. You are a good mixer and an earnest conversationalist, and intelligent, without ever becoming a bore. If a woman, your home will run smoothly, and the grinding of the wheels will never be heard. If a man, you will bring into your home that absolute confidence and trust that bespeaks harmony.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—It is inevitable that the movies will always pay big money to big stars.

The average salary paid players today is less than it was three years ago, but stars whose magnetism draws thousands of dollars weekly to the box office are getting star wages. And that runs into money.

NORMA SHEARER.

The average is less now because so many young players signed to contracts during and since the talkie upheaval, still are considered embryonic material and are paid accordingly.

Stars, however, such as Ruth Chatterton, Norma Shearer, Ramon Novarro, Joan Crawford, Ann Harding, Constance Bennett, Richard Barthelmess, Clara Bow, Greta Garbo and others, whose names alone usually spell box office success, are getting staggering pay weekly checks.

None of those named, it is certain, gets less than $5,000 a week, and most of them probably are in the $7,500 class.

The Fox organization thinks enough of Will Rogers to guarantee him fifteen weeks' work a year at $25,000 a week!

A few others, including George Arliss and Maurice Chevalier, hold contracts for a specific number of pictures, but Rogers tops them by a long ways financially.

Some Get Little.

Competition among the studios keeps stars' salaries up in the thousands. If Constance Bennett, for instance, didn't get a respectable increase every six months, she would probably seek—and obtain—another contract, at her own figure, at one of the other major studios.

Most of the undeveloped players who have been given contracts in the last year or so are getting $750 weekly or less, and many are satisfied with as little as $100. Given a chance, they know they will be worth much more if they click.

When They "Click."

As their popularity grows, so does their pay. If Universal had not written a new agreement for Lew Ayres after he scored in "All Quiet on the Western Front," another studio might have grabbed him up.

So long as some stars are popular enough to bring business amounting to $50,000 a week to a single theater, as they often do, Hollywood will continue to be the pot at the end of the rainbow for those who have that magic something called "It."

Neuritis!

There is no pain like Neuritis. There is nothing quite so torturing—so utterly unbearable as Neuritis. It robs life of all joy—and makes people desperate. But Neuritis is not hopeless—it responds to proper treatment. A well-known physician has written us, "Have been drinking Mountain Valley Water for six weeks for Neuritis, and am feeling better than I have for two years." Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Arkansas, brings relief in Neuritis because it gets at the root of the trouble—it tends to neutralize the acids which are irritating the nerves and retards the further accumulation of these acids by aiding healthy, normal elimination through the kidneys. The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

XXI—Subjugating Savages.

One of Gen. Wood's first acts as Governor of the Moro Province was to issue a decree forbidding human slavery.

"Slavery has been abolished," he wrote I. St. Strachey. "I do not mean by this that we are chasing about the country taking people away from those with whom they have lived and with whom they desire to live, but we have prohibited by most rigorous measures any further raiding or enslaving and are notifying the people broadcast that they are at liberty to go and build homes for themselves wherever they like."

"What is needed," Wood wrote William Taft and Governor of the Philippines, "and all that is needed to bring the Moro into line, and to start him ahead is a strong policy and vigorous enforcement of the law. He must learn that for every offense against the law, he is going to be punished. He will welcome and appreciate protection to life and property and an honest administration of justice. * * *

"The principal things to be broken up among the Moros are the general practice of kidnapping and putting into slavery of Christian Filipinos and savage people of the interior and the absolute disregard for human life in dealing with their inferiors and slaves."

Wood sent emissaries in all directions to interpret his intentions to the Moros and to his more timid and backward children, the savages of the uplands.

One by one his emissaries returned successful from their ventures.

"It is a very great satisfaction," Taft wrote Wood, October 27, "to feel that a strong and forceful will is at work clearing the Moro situation."

Wood Explains New Law.

Everywhere Wood confers with the dattos, explains his new laws, and endeavors to reconcile the savage old autocrats to the limitations of civilization. He enjoys these interminable palavers, enjoys the long trips in the ship's boat up winding rivers between heavily timbered banks. He sleeps in canoes or on the wet ground; carries a pack if need be; struggles through the jungles and over the mountain trails with a vigor and high spirit that makes officers and enlisted men alike his devoted slaves. The tropic strangeness of the country, the curious and beautiful wild-life of the forest enchant him.

Traveling by sea from village to village, he travels by night in order to have all day for thrusts into the interior, study of terrain, inspections. Maj. Robert L. Bullard notes his genius for the utilization of time, and envies him; notes, too, his ability to get the most out of his subordinates. Wood does not expect a man to do everything, but picks each man to do a special thing and praises him if he does it well. Each of his officers is a specialist and hard at work at his specialty. He seems, indeed, to have a peculiar skill in finding each man's merit and use.

"He required not great exactness in the execution of his orders, but the greatest activity and energy," Bullard wrote subsequently. "A lack of energy he could never forgive. But his unforgiveness was in no wise personal; he simply dropped the man that failed and had no more official use for him."

Every expedition becomes for Wood an expedition for geological, biological, ethnological and religious research. His early training had given him the scientific point of view.

Appalled at Lonely Trips.

Bullard, who has lived among the Moros long enough to have acquired respect for their stealth and their sword play, is appalled at Wood's habit of leaving camp alone for an hour's shooting in the evening, or on the march riding out from the column for a personal reconnaissance.

The expeditions are strenuous.

"The whole country was under water," Wood writes of an excursion after a certain Datto Ali in his diary, March 6 "and we had a very hard march across to the Kudarangan hills, where the trail comes out on hard high ground * * * Pulled over the first hills, then across a very bad piece of floating bog, soft and nasty, where we had one of the most difficult pieces of country I ever passed over * * * The water under the bog was anywhere from 4 to 20 feet deep, and in the floating mass were small banana plants, small trees, &c. In fact, it was a typical tropical mass of floating vegetation * * *

"We succeeding in getting the guns and all supplies over safely after the hardest kind of work. The men would suddenly disappear through a mass of floating vegetation as though they had fallen through rotten timber, and had to be pulled out by others standing on pieces of bamboo."

The odds, moreover, are not always against the Moros. As the column which Wood is leading is moving forward in single file along the lake, the Filipino interpreter, Tomas Torres, on the hunt for secreted vintas, finds himself suddenly confronted by a large party of hostile Moros. Instantly they fall upon him. He empties both his revolvers and is defending himself vigorously with a kris when Wood, McCoy, Dorey and one or two others come to his rescue. The Moros tumble into one of the vintas and make for open water. "I took a rifle from one of the men," Wood writes succinctly in his diary, "and did what I could to prevent their escape."

In one of his expeditions, Wood is accompanied by the Episcopal bishop of the Philippines, the Right Rev. Charles H. Brent, an ideal missionary, a gentle, large-hearted being, physically powerful and courageous, intellectually vigorous and dominating. He keeps at Wood's side on the long journeys through the tropical swamps when younger men drop back, endures mosquitoes and tropical deluges with Christian equanimity and handles a shotgun to good account; even on one occasion on Sunday when a bird tempts him with his bronze plumage.

His sermon in camp that day remains memorable. Among the medical stores of the expedition, it happens, there is a case of whisky which has been placed in charge of a certain member of the hospital corps, charged with its safety under threat of certain death. The guardian of the whisky wants to hear the bishop preach, but he dared not leave the whisky. After much pondering he develops a brilliant idea. He suggests to the bishop that a small platform might be helpful as an emergency pulpit. The bishop agrees. So the hospital steward hears the sermon while the bishop keeps involuntary guard over the case of whisky.

Joke Not on Bishop.

But the joke, after all, is not on the bishop. When he is told the character of his platform he exclaims instantly, "Good! At last whisky has served a worthy cause."

In civil work, alternating with journeys of inspection, punitive expeditions and endless and always futile negotiations at long distance with elusive Ali, the months pass by.

Wood is happy in Zamboanga. His wife and children are contented and well. He loves the country, the climate, the free and independent life. He is doing work which he loves, and is successful; disturbing voices of ambition, in this remote garden set in a fairy sea, are hushed; he is surrounded with friends. The antagonism which greeted him on his arrival in the Philippines has evaporated in Zamboanga, long ago, and now in Manila also. His officers are devoted to him with a peculiar loyalty in which the friendship of equals, a son's adoration and a mother's protective instinct are all blended. They know he has faults, but these do not interest them. He might, indeed, commit the seven deadly sins and these man would still love him. They see the man who insists on struggling through the swamps with them, suffering every kind of hardship which they suffer, kneeling in the mud to fasten "old Scott's" leggings when Maj. Hugh L. Scott is exhausted on the march, thoughtful always of their comfort, never thoughtful, it seems, of his own; generous in forming opinions of his subordinates, giving credit where he can, eager that they shall share in his own successes, taking the blame when things go wrong; but, when occasion for reprimand arises, giving an officer a "dressing-down" which may be in whispers, but which burns and quivers in the memory.

The Moro chieftains, whom Wood is gently leading toward the light, fear him at first; then respect him; then become his friends. Wood comes to have a great fondness for them. They are on an entirely different plane from the Christian Filipinos or the pagans; a race apart, with a keen sense of honor and faithful unto death to those they love.

There is at Zamboanga none of the tenseness of the Havana days, the fierce pulling and hauling, the thrust and parry of deadly opponents in combat. Here they are all a huge family, and if, now and then, some refractory tribesmen require chastisement, that is what every paterfamilias has to expect.

Tree Lighted by Fireflies.

The governor's house is spacious and shadowy. The heat is never terrifying, and after 9 o'clock in the morning there is always a breeze from the sea. Wood finds time to play tennis with the children, or to sit on the porch, overlooking the white beach and the purple straits, and to return for an hour to his original profession and study the medical journals. The garden is a paradise for his two boys and his 4-year-old girl. Rabbit deer live on hibiscus flowers in one corner. In one of the trees a monkey makes his habitation and has a way of pulling little Luisita's hair ribbon as she goes by. A large tree, nearby, they call the Christmas tree because at night it is a solid mass of fireflies.

The boys camp on the edge of the sea, keeping a guard all night long like the soldiers, since the country is not yet altogether safe. Wood rides with them and teaches them to swim; takes them now and again on picnics miles off in the hills, or paddles them through mangrove swamps where they pass tarabao, staring heavily, and hear the monkeys chattering in the trees and now and then meet a Moro in his vinta paddling slowly with his kris beside him. The magic of the tropics feeds something within Wood which the world associates neither with doctors nor generals.

Wood has never been so completely happy.

The civil government is prosperous. The revenues, in the second year of Wood's rule, show an increase of almost 50 per cent over the first. Wood is bending every effort to build up the agriculture of the province, stimulating especially the exportation of crude gutta percha and rubber.

Moro Exchanges Aid Trade.

The Moro exchanges which Wood has established, under the sympathetic direction of Capt. John P. Finley, Governor of the Zamboanga district, have stimulated commerce. People who have never before come to the sea coast for trade are bringing large quantities of produce and disposing of them at prices higher than they have ever received before. No more the warlike coast tribes secure produce of the hill men on their own terms; for the hill men, protected by the troops, are doing their own trading. As a consequence, the export trade has jumped 20 per cent in one year, steamships are calling at Zamboanga, where they once steamed indifferently by, and merchants in Manila are indignantly protesting that Zamboanga is getting their Hongkong trade. A quarter of the revenues of the province are being devoted to education. New schools are being opened; in Zamboanga a trade school has been established. Everywhere boards of health have been set up. The Moros are taking kindly to civilization, for they are making money in its beneficent aura.

Meanwhile, there are rumblings in Jolo where the acting governor, Capt. Reeves, is trying to persuade 600 Moros, who have sought refuge in the crater of Bud Dajo, to come home and be good. They are the rag-tag-and-bobtail remnants of two or three revolts, the black sheep of a dozen folds, rebels against the poll-tax, die-hards against the American occupation, outlaws recognizing no datto and condemned by the stable elements among the Moros themselves. They have been permitted to remain in their fastness only because Wood and Maj. Scott, governor of Jolo, hate hoped that time might work soothingly upon their military. Friendly dattos sent to argue with them have returned unsuccessful. The outlaws, convinced that the Americans are too timid to attack, have taken to raiding the peaceful Moros in the valleys roundabout, burning houses, carrying off women, stealing cattle. The Americans and the responsible chiefs are united in the decision that something will have to be done.

Troops Sent After Outlaws.

Late in February, Wood sends troops under Col. Duncan, of the Sixth Infantry, to Bud Dajo. The outlaws are fortified along the rim of a crater 500 yards wide and 50 yards deep, 2,000 feet above the sea. There is no besieging them. They have ample water and supplies enough to last six months. There is nothing to do except to charge the crater and drive them out.

For two days the troops move slowly upward, infantry and dismounted cavalry, sailors from destroyers off-shore, and a detachment of constabulary. The slopes are heavily wooded and so broken that it proves impossible to cut fresh trails, and on the trails themselves men can advance only in single file. They move on hands and knees, or crawl on their bellies. The trail is deep in dust; the heat is almost unbearable.

Laboriously pulling themselves up, hand over hand, the troops move upward, clutching at roots and grass, showered with bullets and butcher knives and flying javelins and boulders.

"The lava ridges were probably, on the average, not more than 8 feet wide," Wood wrote the President, "and in many places the fall-off would land one in the tops of tall trees. They were like boards set up edgeways, and across them were set numbers of barricades. It was an ugly and difficult place to take."

Women Join in Fight.

The heights are bravely defended. Women seeking to achieve a soul in another incarnation are garbed like the men and in the melee indistinguishable from them. They advance with their husbands in intrepid rushes, leaping down from the parapets into the midst of the attacking force, clutching a soldier in a death grapple and rolling with him down the slope. Moro men, unwilling that their families shall survive them, charge, holding the children as shields before them.

The troops swarm over the lip of the crater. The fight becomes a hand-to-hand struggle. The Moros will not surrender or permit their women to surrender. The very wounded fight the hospital stewards with their last spasm. Wood is at the taking of the cotta at the head of the west trail next morning, which ends the battle.

The losses have been terrific. Six hundred Moros lie dead and one-fourth of the troops actively engaged have been killed or wounded.

The news of the battle brought a cablegram of congratulations from the President and a fresh outburst from Wood's enemies. Imaginative correspondents in Manila, relaying the news to their papers in the United States, had embroidered them with gory details which stirred the righteous to protest. Congress rang with oratory. The killing of women and children, indeed, had an ugly sound.

Yellow Press Violent.

The yellow press became violent and Mr. Taft, the Secretary of War, under pressure from politicians of both parties, cabled Wood, stating that it was charged that there had been "wanton slaughter of Moros, men, women and children," and asking for particulars.

The cablegram angered Wood. It seemed a poor reward from the head of the War Department to gallant troops who had achieved a notable victory. The word "wanton" rankled. He had not been directly in command of the assault, but he cabled the Secretary that he assumed "entire responsibility for action of the troops in every particular."

The evidence proved that the slaughter had been inevitable and the friendly Moros told Wood that the battle had had a salutary effect. So for Wood, his assumption of responsibility appealed to the sportsmanship of the officers of the Army and broke down practically the last remnant of rancor that they felt toward the man who had once been a doctor.

Wood was governor of the Moro Province from 1903 to 1906, when he was placed in command of the Philippines department of the Army, with headquarters at Manila. In 1908, he was transferred to Governor's Island, in New York Harbor, as commanding general of the Department of the East and two years later became chief of staff.

(Copyright, 1931.)

Tomorrow's installment in Section II of the "Life Story of Gen. Wood" deals with his administration as Chief of Staff of the Army and the memorable battle against War Department bureaucracy which forced retirement of Adjt. Gen. F. C. Ainsworth in 1912.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

LAUNDRY EQUIPMENT.
(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

Laundry equipment should be chosen as well as placed from the point of view of service and of the convenience and comfort of the worker. The working surface of nearly all laundry equipment is too low. This places the woman operating it so out of balance that she is soon fatigued. The top rim of the tub should be placed so that she does not stoop from the shoulders. A portable washtub may be raised or lowered to the right height by means of a suitable bench. Little of the washing process is done in the bottom of the tub, the working height being about half way up the side. If the top of the washboard is too high, it may be lowered by cutting off part of the legs. The ironing table or board should be so placed that force from the shoulder can be applied easily; 31 or 32 inches is a good average height.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

With NELSON B. BELL

THE untimely passing of Anna Pavlowa, probably the stage's foremost ballerina since Adeline Genee, recalls the only occasion upon which it ever fell to my lot to enjoy any considerable visit with her—and strangely enough it was on a motion-picture set.

At Universal City, on the outskirts of Los Angeles, in 1915, there was being made what it was hoped would eventuate into one of the memorable pictures of all time. The film was being produced on that scale, despite the discouragements of a most inauspicious beginning. Lois Weber—and what ever became of her, by the way?—was the director, and Phillips Smalley, her then husband, assistant director. Anna Pavlowa was the star. The name of the picture was "The Dumb Girl of Portici," an adaptation of a grand opera libretto, little known to modern audiences.

Pavlowa was no less than electric when acting before the cameras and scarcely less a dynamo of nervous energy while resting outside the lines. She insisted on sending over to the Administration Building for the complete synopsis of the story, so that I might be fully apprised of what she deemed the delicate nuances of a narrative she was sure would place her among the immortals of the cinema. All very engaging.

There was a system in operation at Universal City at the time whereby any visitor to the plant—and they were welcomed in those distant days—by registering at the office, and indicating what picture he had watched in course of filming, would be advised by card when that particular production was to be exhibited in his home city, and at what theater. In due course, I received such word and hastened to the Garrick Theater at Seventh and F streets, where Hecht's now stands, then being operated by Harry Crandall, to revel in the manifold glories of "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

From that day to this, it has occupied first place on my list of the world's worst pictures—and on Harry Crandall's, too, I think—but it was through no fault of Pavlowa's. She was swell—or seemed so to me when I remembered how considerate she had been out there on the lot.

As far as I am aware, that was the last picture she ever made.

Some interest should attach to George W. Wickersham's own interpretation of the long-awaited report of President Hoover's Law Observance and Enforcement Commission, of which he was chairman, being presented through the issue of the Fox Movietone News current at the Fox Theater.

Chairman Wickersham reduces the bulky summary of more than a year's consideration of a tough subject to eight major questions. He cites the commission's determination as to each and, as nearly as I am able to condense the eight pronouncements into a single observation, what he means to say is that the eighteenth amendment, with its supporting legislation, is all right, even if it is all wrong!

Speaking of the Fox, this is written immediately after having witnessed the performance of Marlene Dietrich, supporting Emil Jannings in his first talking picture in English, "The Blue Angel," and if any one can detect any suggestion of imitation of Greta Garbo in her portrayal of a cheap variety artiste in a traveling cabaret, his vision is much more penetrating than mine own—which isn't going much, at that.

While "The Blue Angel" will not be comprehensively reviewed until Sunday's paper, it may be permissible to say now that Marlene Dietrich in this is much more like Phyllis Haver, Jannings' leading woman, in "The Way of All Flesh" than she is like Garbo.

The more I think of it, the more I suspect that the screen is big enough for both Garbo and Dietrich—with no harm to either.

There was an interesting sidelight recently to the premiere on Broadway of the sound version of "The Birth of a Nation," the unusual attraction opening today at the Rialto. It was the reunion of David Wark Griffith and nine members of the original cast of the picture made 16 years ago. Mr. Griffith was host, and the occasion of the gathering of the celebrities was to commemorate the revision of the famous masterpiece to include sound effects and the original musical score.

Griffith outlined the difficulties he experienced in financing his elaborate project—too elaborate for its day, everybody thought—and revealed the further fact that "The Birth" has been viewed by more than 50,000,000 people since its release.

The players present were Mae Marsh, the little sister; Mary Alden, the mulatto girl; Donald Crisp, who played Gen. Grant; Henry B. Walthall, the little colonel; Spottiswood Aitken, Col. Cameron; Joseph Henabery, Lincoln; Walter Long, "white-arm" Gus; Ralph Lewis, elder Stoneman, and Tom Wilson, who played many colored roles.

Lillian Gish, owing to stage engagements, was absent, as were, of course, Wallace Reid and George Seigmann, both dead.

In looking through the old copy book, the Warner executives evidently hit upon such ancient and honorable adages as "Strike while the iron is hot," "Procrastination is the thief of dimes" and others of like ilk, and forthwith set about suiting the action to the implication of the words.

The result is that "Little Caesar," wihtout stopping to catch his breath, continues at the Metropolitan, beginning today, the record-smashing run begun last Saturday at the Earle. Not only that, but it is additionally announced that the promise of capacity business has been so emphatically indicated that "Little Caesar" is in for the week at the Met, instead of the four days called for by the new policy of the house.

If this picture had a theme song, it would no doubt be "Hail, Hail, et so forth."

What Washington club, on account of nonpayment, recently remitted four years' nonresident dues, at $5 per year, to what famous theatrical millionaire?

The first correct answer wins the combination cast-iron nutmeg grater and monocle wiper.

There is probably no foundation in fact for the suspicion that Postmaster General Brown is promoting all this uncertainty about Allan Rogers' retention as m. c. at the Palace to promote the sale of postage stamps. But am I getting letters!

As this is written at 5 in the afternoon, that was a great party they had at RKO-Keith's last night at 8:45—I hope!

Dr. Wickey Heads Education Boards

Elected as President of Lutheran Group; Was Once Pastor Here.

Dr. Gould Wickey, executive secretary of the Board of Education of the United Lutheran Church in America, with offices in Washington, has been elected president of the Council of Church Boards of Education. It was announced yesterday. The council is a clearing house for interdenominational educational relationships.

Dr. Wickey was called to the secretaryship of the education board of the Lutheran Church in 1929, following a survey of the educational affairs of the denominations by a commission under the guidance of the late Dr. Leonard and Dr. E. Evenden, of Columbia University.

Before accepting his present position with the Lutheran Church Dr. Wickey was president of Carthage College, at Carthage, Ill. He was ordained a minister in the church in 1916, and his first pastorate was in this city, where he served at the Georgetown Lutheran Church in 1916-1917. He was also pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church at Bismark, N. Dak., resigning there to become president of the college.

DR. GOULD WICKEY.

Girl Is Given Life Term for Murder

Sentence Is Passed After Oklahoma Waitress Confesses Act.

Independence, Kans., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Muriel Sullivan, 18-year-old assassin, pleaded guilty today to the murder of Mrs. Maude Martin, of Coffeyville, and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The girl, a waitress at Seminole, Okla., confessed she shot Mrs. Martin to death for a promised $100, of which she said she received only $35.

Mrs. Martin was slain, the girl said, to prevent her from testifying against Dr. S. A. Brainard, charged with performing an illegal operation which led to the death of Esther O'Dare Nidiffer.

Miss Sullivan said Paul Jones, Coffeyville motor car salesman, had hired her to commit the murder. Jones, Dr. Brainard and a taxi driver were arrested with Miss Sullivan and all face murder charges.

MURDER
IN WASHINGTON BECOMES AN ART

Read This Enlightening Article

Tomorrow in the Sunday Magazine Section of The Washington Post

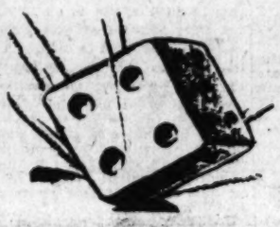
Strange as It Seems

Within eighteen months three young women have been murdered under conditions and attendant circumstances which bear a remarkable similarity. A check-up on the crimes indicates clearly a mental kinship of the perpetrators. The article is more a discussion of the psychological aspects of the murders than a rehearsal of the revolting details.

Among the Other Features You'll Find of Interest Are:



Choosing the President By Chance

The plans most recently discussed for a change in the method of electing Presidents brings to light many of the previous suggestions and not the least interesting and novel of these was the scheme to select the Chief Executive by chance from among the Senators.

When Washington Was Fort-Girdled

Even after the invasion of the Capital by British troops during the War of 1812 it took the threat of a visit from Confederate troops during the War of the Secession to awaken Washington to the need for forts and they were promptly built. These old sites are to be preserved and their histories are here interestingly set forth.

A Real Noah's Ark on the Potomac

A Zoological Park brings together strange creatures, birds and reptiles and is actually an "Educational Institution," just as the Chinese described a zoo some few thousand years ago. The one in Washington proves the truth of the Oriental description as does none other in the country.

The Edith Johnson articles dealing with modern day problems are growing in popularity with every issue of the Sunday Magazine and the number of those applying to her for help in solving difficulties is increasing. An inquiry addressed to Miss Johnson, care The Washington Post, will be answered.

Master Crimes will prove entertaining reading to any one interested in the strange quirks of the abnormal mind.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

SICK HEADACHE.

THE sick headache that goes by the name "migraine," is nothing more than a group of disorders having headache and a few other symptoms in common, but produced by a considerable variety of causes. Some get an attack when they eat too much starchy food. Others are disabled by eating chocolate. In many cases migraine seems to be a close kinsman of nettlerash and asthma, and to be caused by acute sensitiveness. In these people migraine is an allergy disease.

There are others in whom still other causes are the principal offenders. In addition, there are many causes which operate as contributing factors. Among these are constipation, monthly phenomena in women, worry, excitement, poor sleeping, poor ventilation and fatigue.

Dr. Barborka tried to discover what proportion of cases of typical, well-established migraine were due to acidosis or something related to it. He tried this by putting 50 migraine people, mostly men, on a diet which caused acidosis and keeping them steadily on this diet for six months. In this series he found that 28 per cent were cured of this migraine. Another 50 per cent still had attacks of sick headache, but they were farther apart and the headaches were less severe. Something like the other 22 per cent were not improved in any degree.

The diet he used was known as the ketogenic diet. It is about the same as is used in epilepsy. It is very high in fats, oils and greases and is correspondingly low in bread, potatoes, sugar, cereal and other carbohydrates. The individual is, or should be, kept constantly in a state of acidosis as shown by laboratory tests.

In so far as he could, he did not change the routine of life of the people under trial except as to the diet. Practically speaking, 100 per cent success in such efforts is an impossibility. Try as hard as you please the people under such a regime do not live just as they did before. They worry less, or more; their outlook on life is different for the time; they work less, or more; exercise less, or more. Something is always different. On the other hand, it is not always easy to keep a person in a condition of uniform acidosis. Eating so much fat and so little bread becomes very monotonous.

The experiment proves that a fair part of those who have migraine can escape headaches by eating a diet rich in fats. Other trials have proved that still others can escape their headaches by other diets. All in all, there is considerable chance that a person with migraine can be cured if he will persevere.

HAVE AN EXAMINATION.

O. M. writes: Is it natural for a woman who is to have a child to gain in weight by leaps and bounds? The baby will not arrive until next April, and I have already gained more than 12 pounds. Within the last two weeks I have gained fully 8 pounds. Is that the natural course of events or is my diet wrong? I do not want to do anything that might hurt the child.

REPLY.

Material gain in weight should be investigated. It may be related to puerperal convulsions, a group of troubles that threaten both mother and child. Have your physician investigate your blood pressure and your kidneys, and change your diet.

UPSETS CAUSE FIVE-WAY TIE IN SCHOOL SERIES

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—Time and the tragedy of his early death and his pathetic physical frailty have rather blurred some of the realities of the career of the late Miller Huggins, the little manager of the New York Yankees, whose sudden taking-off aroused the ready emotionalism of the sporting populace. The sporting element is very sentimental anyway, with a simple awe of the hereafter, and when a fellow goes, men who fought him and derived a genuine joy from hatred of him are likely to roll their eyes, lower their voices to a ghostly whisper, and never mention his name again but to say "God rest his soul; he's dead and gone now."

I know, for instance, a character in the prize fighting business, ordinarily quite even tempered and more inclined to be friendly than otherwise, who has been compounding interest at usurious rates on a grudge against another character for some years. At the present time, the grudge, with accumulated dividends, is so great that the original grouch is proportionately about the same as Henry Ford's original cash investment is to his present fortune.

"I only hope," he said recently, "that I live to see the day when I can write the word 'rat' on his gravestone."

"Oh, now," I objected, "you know you don't mean that."

"Well," said he, "wait till he dies. Then I'll see."

I felt particularly unhappy about the death of Miller Huggins because, due to some mutual stand-offishness, I had never got around to explaining to him that I did not really call him a mugg in print one time in a story sent from St. Petersburg, Fla., where the Yankees were training. The fact was that I had merely interpreted the attitude of some of Miller's players toward him. The ball club was disorganized.

EXPLAINED ATTITUDE OF CLUB

Babe Ruth was sullen and contemptuous because, toward the close of the previous season, when the ball club was in bad condition, Huggins, for the first time, had struck back at him, suspending him from the team in a manner that was a public humiliation for the Babe.

The Babe quit the ball club in St. Louis and announced that he was returning to New York to put the case up to Jake, meaning Jake Ruppert, the brewer, who owns the team. The Babe's bearing implied that he was quite sure that when Jake heard the details he would lift the suspension, repudiate Huggins and sustain him. When he did arrive in New York, the Babe was fined $5,000, the suspension was affirmed and, as a condition to his reinstatement, he was required to apologize to Huggins. The Babe was still young, reckless and unmanageable then, and the next spring, though he had gone through the motions of the required amends, he still despised Huggins.

The ball club had finished the season down near the bottom and had begun the training season for the next year at a go-as-you-please rate. The younger and less privileged athletes took their cue as to discipline and respect for the executive authority from the Babe, and therefore it was not surprising that the team, after a couple of weeks in training, had yet to win a practice game and were in receipt of a challenge from the bellboys in their hotel.

Lott-Van Ryn In Canadian Net Final

U. S. Davis Cup Aces Beat Bell and Hall in Three Sets.

Chicago Youth Seeks His Fourth Title in Five Years.

MONTREAL, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Two youthful members of America's Davis Cup squad the last two years—George Lott, of Chicago, and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia—meet tomorrow in the finals of the Canadian indoor tennis championships for the crown Lott now wears.

They won their matches in the all-United States semifinals today in straight sets, Lott defeating Berkeley Bell, of New York, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4 in one bracket and Van Ryn disposing of J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., in the other, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2.

It will be Lott's fourth finals match in the five years he has competed in the Canadian indoor championships. He defeated Willard Crocker, of Montreal, to win the title in 1927; beat Frank Shields, of New York, in the 1928 finals, and last year won from Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, Pa., in the finals.

Hall Eliminated Lott in 1929.

In 1929 Lott was eliminated in the semifinals by Hall, who was eliminated in the same round today.

Both Davis Cup youngsters were in nice stroking from today and won without difficulty. If the scores are taken into consideration, Lott would appear to have had the harder match, but in reality the reverse was true.

Hall made Van Ryn fight for every point, while Lott maneuvered Bell around the court almost at will, keeping him away from the net, where the former Texan is the most dangerous. He played just good enough to win.

Amateur Boxing Teams Arrive From Europe

New York, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Three European boxing teams of four men each—from Ireland, Belgium and Poland—arrived today on the liner Milwaukee to compete against a team of twelve New York boxers in an amateur show at Madison Square Garden February 9. The tourney is sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Union.

The foreign contingent includes three lightweights, one welterweight, four middleweights, one light heavy and three heavyweights.

Big Ten Leaders Face Court Tests Tonight

Chicago, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Northwestern and Chicago, the two undefeated leaders in the big ten basketball championship race, risk their exalted positions tomorrow night against a pair of the most dangerous teams in the title fight.

Northwestern, possessor of a technical edge in the race with three victories to Chicago's two, meets Ohio State at Evanston, while Chicago, the surprise team of the conference, tackles Michigan at the Midway. Illinois invades Wisconsin at Madison to round out the night's three-card attraction, but the game has little or no importance from a championship aspect, as the Badgers have been defeated three times in five starts, while the Illini have dropped four straight.

TORNADOES perform strange tricks. During the five minutes in which hundreds of buildings were wrecked by the St. Louis twister in September, 1927, a mechanic, looking through a garage window, saw the walls of a bakery across the street split wide open. The 3-year-old baby girl shot out of one of the cracks and soared high into the air. The bakery was completely wrecked, but the baby was found unharmed.

The famous steamboat Robert E. Lee set a record of 3 days, 18 hours, 14 minutes in her memorable race with the Natchez, in 1870. The race was from New Orleans to St. Louis, a distance of 1,300 miles.

The record stood until 1929 when the launch Bogie made the same run in two hours less time.

When Olive Palmer heard that William Wade Hinshaw was planning a revival of 21 operas in New York, she immediately telephone him from St. Louis. Hinshaw had never met Miss Palmer and a decision had to be made at once, so she burst into song, and appropriately enough, the "Bell Song," from "Dinora." When she had finished the job was hers.

Duckpin Aces Open Stakes Tonight

Impressive Array to Clash at Coliseum in First Block.

Rosenberg to Defend Title; First Prize to Be $725.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

ONE of the most select local bowling fields ever assembled, perhaps the finest, will gather tonight to inaugurate the fifth annual Howard Campbell Sweepstakes, the first five-game block of which will be rolled on the Coliseum drives, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

With very few exceptions, every outstanding pinman in Washington and its suburbs is risking a $25 entry fee in the competition. It is confidently expected by officials in charge that last year's record entry total of 56 will be exceeded in the present stakes.

Although the entry list will be studded with past winners of the affair, and rollers who have captured other feature duckpin events held locally in the last few years or so, there are no outstanding favorites. Almost every entrant is given a fair chance to win, which augurs well for some spirited competition.

Former Winners Among List.

Best known among the maple-crashers who will roll tonight are Howard Campbell, after whom the affair was named; Jack Whalen, winner of the recent National Duckpin Bowling Congress Sweepstakes; Maxie Rosenberg, who won the Campbell stakes last year; Tony Santini, winner of the 1929 Evening Star tournament; Clem Weidman, winner in the 1930 Star tournament; Jack Wolstenholme, George Friend, runner-up to Rosenberg last year; Eddie Espey, National Junior champion; Glenn Wolstenholme, winner of the first Howard Campbell Sweepstake in 1927; Red Megaw, 1928 winner; Brad Mandley, 1929 winner, who finished second in the national stakes several weeks ago; Oscar Hiser, Bernie Frye, Paul Harrison, Ollie Pacini, Hokie Smith and Burt Parsons.

The winner of the stakes will receive a monetary prize approximating $725, in addition to a diamond medal. The runner-up will get about $325, while $200 will go to the third man, $150 to the fourth, and $75 to the fifth. Six $25 prizes will be awarded to the pinmen achieving high game and high set each of the three nights.

Shift Next Week to Convention Hall.

Fifteen games will be rolled in all, and total pins will count. Next Saturday action will shift to the Convention Hall alleys, where the second block will be bowled, while the third five-game block will be rolled at the Lucky Strike the following Saturday.

GAMES TUESDAY.

Business vs. Western.
Eastern vs. Tech.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

TWO much-abused under dogs turned with a snarl on their supposed betters yesterday and thoroughly deadlocked the high school series. Central turning on Eastern and marking the erstwhile league leaders with a 39-31 defeat, and Business creating the sensation of the tourney to date by downing Tech, 26-24. As a minor result of these untoward actions, all five teams are in first place, all five teams are in last place and the experts whose job it is to pick winners are in what is generally known as a quandary.

One can not underestimate the importance of Central's sudden resuscitation in the Eastern game and the splendid victory which was achieved, but honors and emphasis must be given the second game of the afternoon's play at Tech Gym, that memorable Business-Tech game.

Business Plays Inspired Game.

Marking new levels in frenzied play and reception the two teams put up an exhibition unparalleled in the last several years. Business Team seemed to play with a spirit born of years of being an under dog against its will. Snatching the lead at the very outset it hung to its just gains with as dogged a spirit as has been seen on a basket ball court. Even at the end, when the stage was set for the customary Tech whirlwind finish—the Maroon and Gray actually going ahead with but two minutes to play—Business never faltered.

The game swarmed with individual performances. Bobby Lucas' likeness, the almost apparition of his monkey-like dribbling and ability to come through at the critical moment with a basket; the wonder of his passing and the apprehensive tongue which puts in an appearance when the battle rages—bids fair to be stamped indelibly in every one of the 3,000 minds who saw his work yesterday, and in the Eastern game of last Tuesday.

Lucas' Strategy Works.

Lucas' call for time out after Willison had dropped in the first of his two free tosses with Business leading, 25-24, was as masterful a move as the series has seen. Willison's hot hand cooled off during the time out, and he missed the second toss.

Then there was Sis Esenstadt, injected into the game in the last 2 minutes of play, who came through with a pot from midfloor to give his team a lead of 25-23, after Lucas had put Business back on even terms with Tech by sinking a foul shot amid a bedlam of yells. Then Everett Russell, Tech's cool-headed general, who put up a whale of a battle at forward and guard and started the Tech spurt which saw it overtake and go ahead of Business in the closing moments of the game. Then Bill Duryee, whose all-around floor work gave groundwork to the effervescent play of Lucas; and George Beach, who put Tech ahead, 20-19, with a one-handed thrust of a shot, best seen to be appreciated.

For the second time in a week Business contrived to put to rout its opposition's organized plan of defense. In the Eastern game last Tuesday Business achieved an early pot-shotting lead of 5-3 and promptly began to freeze the ball to a theretofore unattainable temperature. Eastern's makeshift and unwieldly zone defense demobilized quickly, even as did Tech's well conceived zone play yesterday. Setting the ball when the game had progressed but several minutes, Lucas & Co. carried it down underneath its own basket. Tech's zone work disbanded immediately, never to regain its poise. Business capitalized the man-to-man play of Tech in decisive fashion, Lucas and Nemerofsky dribbling down the floor with only the hindrance of one man apiece, apiece.

Eastern's Play Cracks.

Nothing that Central's players did yesterday could go wrong. The Blue and White had everything and knew it, once Eddie DeLisio had dropped in a long pot after eight minutes of scorelessness on the part of both teams. Central took the lead at 7-6 near the half and was unstoppable thereafter.

Eastern cracked open about midway and presented the spectacle of a team, once though unstoppable, now in the throes of indecisive play. It could do nothing with the good play of Central until the end of the game was three minutes off, then baskets by Noonan, Lieb, Waters, Kane and Shirley jumped up Eastern's score from 18-30 to 30-38. Central was progressing steadily all the while.

Eastern has shown that it depends mostly on Bill Noonan, center, to decide the fate, and while the big youth came through with 11 points yesterday, he more than any of his teammates failed to capitalize the foul shots presented to Eastern, the making of which would have won the game, the recapitulation shows.

Henry Broadbent shone notably at his guard position, playing perhaps his best game of the series. Little behind him were Burke and Cumberland, whose passing was uniformly excellent.

The first indoor horseshoe pitching court in Washington will be opened to the public tonight with an exhibition match at the Green Way, occupying the first floor of the Rendezvous bowling establishment. N. E. Peake, Washington district champion, will oppose Earl Crane, a leader in local horseshoe pitching circles. Four regulation courts have been installed.

Defensive Record Set In 3-Cushion Billiards

Chicago, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Johnny Layton, the Sedalia, Mo., master of the ivories, established a new defensive record for a world's three-cushion billiard championship tournament at Bensinger's today by crushing Jess Jacobs, Southern titleholder from St. Louis, 50 to 3 in 31 innings.

The one-sided triumph, gained in the remarkably fast time of 50 minutes, came within one point of tying the all-time defensive mark in any kind of three-cushion competition, Willie Hoppe having defeated Harry Wakefield, 50 to 2, in a tournament at New York in 1927.

Layton's victory, the second in three starts, shoved him into fourth place in the eight-man struggle for the title he has owned without interruption since 1928. So remarkable was Layton's defense today that Jacobs failed to click off a point until the fourteenth inning.

De Molays Gain Tie In Intercity League

The De Molay team gained a tie for the lead with the Hoplites by defeating the Western Electric quintet, 24-23, in an Intercity League game last night at the Laurel Armory.

The De Molays spurted in the second half with Western Electric leading at half time, 24-22. W. Sinclair led the attack.

In the preliminary the St. Stephen's quintet was beaten by the Laurel Guards in a five-minute overtime period, 30-27, on a field goal by Edmonston.

Ruth Swaps Wisecracks With Dempsey; Both Agree Baseball, Boxing Too Tame

Recall Rough Days of Sport; Business Invades Realm.

Jack Dempsey — Babe Ruth

By ALAN GOULD.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—"Hi, Jack, how's the kid?"

"Hello, Babe, how's the old man?"

The two masters of maul, Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth, surveyed each other in a room on the ninth floor of the Polyclinic Hospital—the one a temporary patient, the other a well-wisher and associate in the great business of furnishing sport personality to the American public.

Proposes Wrestling Racket for Babe.

"You're younger than I am, why haven't you got a sock or two left for some of these birds they call heavyweights nowadays?" asked Ruth.

"With that left?" retorted Dempsey. "But say, you are getting pretty old. Why don't you look into that wrestling racket, Babe? It would be great stuff for you after you're through with baseball.

"Can't lose, partner. Bill you as El Youssof Ruth, the Terrible Turk. Be a riot. You got the beef now, kid. But you look to be in trim."

Ruth Agrees Baseball Is Too Tame.

"Trouble with baseball, like boxing it's got kind of tame," remarked Dempsey.

"Why, say," agreed Ruth, "things are getting so polite out there on the ball field now, I expect we will have to put on stiff collars and ties next.

"The boys are hustling but the fighting spirit has cooled off.

"Say, I remember a game back at Detroit when things were good. We had the Tigers trimmed, about 9 to 0. Ehmke was pitching and Cobb, then managing the club, also was in centerfield. Ehmke dusted me off. I yelled at him and he passed me. Bob Meusel, next up, took one in the ribs and made a rush for Ehmke. I left first base and headed for Cobb. In no time, thousands were out on the field and surrounded Cobb and myself. Next day, the park was packed and there must have been 400 cops to keep order. The fans like a scrap in any sport.

Ball Players Now Are Business Men.

"Things have changed. The real fighters, like Cobb, have passed out of baseball. The youngsters coming up are different from the days when I broke in. They're business men now."

For more than an hour, between phone calls and telegrams, Ruth and Dempsey talked of ball games and fights, referees and umpires, Tex Rickard and Judge Landis. They agreed it gets tough when the old legs start to slow up. They talked of the younger generation of athletes like a pair of gray-haired old men. They parted like a couple of fraternity brothers.

Dempsey, his swollen hand responding rapidly to treatment, expects to leave the hospital tomorrow and board an evening train for New Orleans, where he is booked to referee the Canzoneri-Farr fight next week.

Dundee and Harvey Sign for Return Bout

New York, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Vince Dundee, Baltimore Italian, and Len Harvey, middleweight champion of England, have accepted terms for a return bout February 13, Madison Square Garden officials announced today.

Dundee won a decision over Harvey in their first meeting two weeks ago after having been floored for a count of nine in the first round. The bout is to be for 12 rounds.

Five Players Now Balk at Terms Of Indians Despite Wage Boosts

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—The number of recalcitrant Cleveland Indians grew to five today and reminded the management that the joy of winning in the summer often turns pale in the winter.

Wesley Ferrell, one of the league's best hurlers; Eddie Morgan, home run hitting first baseman; Johnny Hodapp, second baseman; Earl Averill, slugging outfielder, and Catcher Luke Sewell—the nucleus of the club—have returned their contracts unsigned although, excepting Sewell, all were offered increases of $1,000 to $6,000, and Dick Porter, another awaiting outfielder, has not been heard from.

Billy Evans, manager of the Tribe, said Ferrell was offered a salary higher than that drawn by Bob Grove. George Earnshaw and Ted Lyons or any other flinger last season. Ferrell, however, was reported to have asked a doubled salary.

Evans declined to quote figures asked or offered, but announced the club has gone its limit. None of the unsigned athletes will be listed as holdouts until the spring training season starts, however.

Amateur League Fives Play 2 Games Tonight

The Y. M. C. A. and Potomac Boat Club fives will make their debut in the District of Columbia Amateur Basket Ball League tonight in a pair of contests at the Y. M. C. A. Gym.

The "Y" quintet will stack up against the fast traveling Saks Clothiers, while the Boat Club will take on the Eastern Whirlwinds. The first game will start at 7:30 o'clock, and the second contest one hour later. Dancing will follow the games.

Although meeting a team which has taken the measure of eighteen teams so far this season, the Y. M. C. A. tossers are conceded an even chance to trounce the Clothiers. By virtue of their 26-to-14 triumph over Palace-District Grocery Stores in their first league contest last Thursday, the Whirlwinds are considered a slight favorite over the Boatmen.

Schaaf Wins Fight From Jim Braddock

New York, JanJ. 23 (A.P.).—Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, battered out a decision over Lanky Jim Braddock, of Jersey City, tonight in a 10-round feature bout. The fight was slow until the closing rounds. Schaaf weighed 198½; Braddock 190½.

Miami Donates Park For Carnera-Maloney

Miami, Fla., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—The City of Miami took the Primo Carnera-Jimmy Maloney heavyweight fight, scheduled for March 5, under its cloak today at a meeting of municipal officials, the Miami Boxing Commission and Frank J. Bruen, promoter.

Use of Moore Park, owned by the city, was donated in return for whatever improvements are made in preparation for a "third battle of the palms."

The fight will be sponsored by the local post of the American Legion, units of the Florida National Guard, the University of Miami and the Y. M. C. A.

Martins to Populate Milrose A. A. Games

There are Sera Martin, of France; Dr. Paul Martin, of Switzerland; Sam Martin, of the Boston A. A., and Orval Martin, formerly of Purdue and now of the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Some enterprising director could do no worse than arrange a "Martin-half-mile special."

Tony Manero, Alone of Elite, Survives on West Coast.

RIVERIA COUNTY CLUB, Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Southern California's proverbial sunshine failed to smile on those whose names have become by words in professional golf circles today, and only one of the elite who qualified in the motion picture $3,200 golf championship was able to survive the first two rounds of match play.

The greater share of the stars lost out in the first round, played in a slow but steady rain. Only Tony Manero, New Yorker, who won the Pasadena $$4,000 open, remained in the second eighteen holes.

Macdonald Smith, Horton Smith, Walter Hagen, George Von Elm, Craig Wood, Johnny Golden, Harry Cooper, Joe Kirkwood, Jack Forrester, Abe Espinosa and Joe Turnesa were beaten as an arrany of younger players pushed on to the third round.

More than 700 spectators crowded the Boys' Club gymnasium last night to witness the program of boxing and wrestling matched staged by the club. The crowd was not disappointed as the youngsters stood toe to toe in bouts that would have shamed some of the $20 shows at Madison Square Garden.

French's and Stwarts Independent Winners

French's-R. F. & P. moved into first place in the Independent Basket Ball League last night at th Alexandria Armory by taking the measure of the Northern A. C. tossers by the score 40-to-23. Cabell and McMeniman were the hot-handed basketers of the winners, while Pepco Barry was the lone Northern able to shake loose his guarding consistently.

The big upset of the pro league was registered at Silver Spring High School when Stewart Bros. Photographers defeated the Census Enumerators by the count of 31-11, the Enumerators being completely checked by the smoothness and keeness of the other team.

VIRGINIA FIVE DEFEATS V. M. I.

Cavaliers Gain Lead at Start; Harrison Scoring Star.

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 23.—Virginia jumped into a 10-point lead in the first ten minutes of a fast game with V. M. I. here tonight and then played the Cadets on practically even terms to win 28 to 21.

Both teams passed and dribbled with dazzling speed, but the Cavaliers, with Harrison starring, had a better range on the basket. Harrison dropped in three goals and Mayo and Delafield netted one each before Tom Grainger scored for V. M. I. with a neat side shot.

Grainger and Bob Brown kept the Cadets in the scoring, but Virginia employed the bounce pass cleverly to get in shooting territory and held a lead of 18 to 11 at half time. The second half started at top speed with the teams alternating in finding the hoops but midway in the period the pace was eased up with the Cavaliers protecting their lead by keeping possession of the ball the greater part of the time.

SAYS PEGLER

trader in St. Petersburg and as the boom was beginning to subside at the time he probably had more urgent worries than the apparent slackness in a ball club which was potentially strong.

I believe sports writers, like the political writers in Washington, are likely to be influenced by considerations of personal friendship, and I was not intimate with either Huggins or Ruth. But it was apparent that the true story of the state of affairs in the Yankee Team had not yet been told, so, in blunt, tactless language, I described it, remarking that there probably were some very good ball players on the team but that in the haphazard practice to date there had been no test of the team's efficiency and concluding that the trouble was that there was a disposition to regard the manager as a mugg.

Two days later, when the story bounced back to St. Petersburg in print, Miller Huggins, for the first time in his tenure as manager, took hold. He managed to convey the idea that he was the boss of the ball club, and, as I remember it, the Yankees, who had not won a practice game up to that time, went out and won 22 ball games, a string extending into the regular season up home. By mid-season they were so far in front that the race was no contest and they were the champions of their league again and just killing time waiting for the world series long before the season closed late in September.

GETS BLAME FOR N. Y. VICTORY

Mark Roth, the traveling secretary of the club, stood at the gate the day the world series opened. Mr. Roth receives a share of the world series pool when the Yankees qualify and he was very happy to be in again.

"There's my pal," Mr. Roth exclaimed with a certain air, as I walked into the ball yard. "There's the guy that riled the Miller and put us in the world series."

In his last two years or so, Huggins finally managed to project his personality a short distance beyond the obscurity of the dugout, mainly through some of the baseball writers who had finally come to recognize him as a human being.

The Babe, himself, matured in time to become a loyal subordinate of the Miller before Huggins died and thus to square himself with his conscience and with Huggins. The Miller had been rather an invalid for a long time and, owing to some trouble with his teeth and his digestion, he sometimes avoided robust food in the dining cars and lived on consomme and milk toast. This was unfortunate. Ruth thought he knew more about baseball than Huggins and there was, between them, that malignant sentiment which often exists between a big, brawny subordinate and a small, delicate executive. The Miller's partiality to consomme and milk toast cost him as many pains as it obviated. Big, healthy steak eaters and beer drinkers have only pity for invalids.

But it was all even when the Miller died. The players were his friends and loyal subordinates by then and he had overcome his reticence to become a pal of theirs.

So, when they say "old Hug; he's dead and gone now; God rest his soul," they mean it more than the sentimental sport people usually do.

NAVY MEETS CANADIAN MATMEN

Bouts Feature Card Today; Basketers Invade Penn.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 23.—With the basket ball team meeting University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia tomorrow, wrestling bouts with the University of Toronto will be the outstanding events on the home week-end card for Annapolis midshipmen. The Canadians have been coming to Annapolis in recent years to contest with the midshipmen in both wrestling and boxing, and while furnishing keen competition they have never succeeded in registering a victory.

The Navy Plebe basketers will entertain Business High School of Washington, while the fencing team will open its season in a series of bouts with the New York Fencers Club, and the small bore rifle team will break out in an indoor shoulder to shoulder match with the marksmen of Georgetown to complete the day's local card.

Middie Five Beaten Only by Duke.

The varsity game with Penn is one of the most important on Navy's schedule, owing to the rivalry between the institutions in all branches of athletics. The Middies will enter the battle with a record of seven victories out of eight starts. Their only reverse was at the hands of Duke, a week ago, and they absorbed that licking largely because of the absence of Loughran, star forward, from the line-up.

This clever shooter who is hanging up a fine record for point scoring was laid up by an injury on that occasion but is in good trim for the go against the Quakers.

Braves Sell Cooney, Club's Oldest Pitcher

Boston, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Johnny Cooney, southpaw pitcher and the oldest in point of service on the Boston National League Baseball Club, was sold today to Toledo, of the American Association, Ed Cunningham, Braves secretary, announced.

Cooney joined the Braves in the fall of 1920, and with the exception of a year spent with the New Haven Club, of the Eastern League, has been with the Tribe ever since. He has had an ailing arm for the past two seasons and has been of little use to the Boston Club.

Western Five Beats Staunton Cadets, 24-21

Special to The Washington PoPst.

Staunton, Va., January 23.—Western High School, of Washington, D. C., sent down a smooth working squad of basketmen today who took the measure of the Staunton Military Academy's strong outfit by the score 24-21.

It was a rough and tumble fray from start to finish, Western capitalizing on eight free tosses, the work of Roy Yowell being especially potent in this respect.

Western led all the way, but by a narrow margin. Buscher and Fox were Western's scoring threats, while the local boys divided honors about evenly.

Hitting The Head Pin

ALL entries for the United States Duckpin Championship Tournament, to be held at the Convention Hall alleys from February 16 next to March 7, must beturned in by tonight, according to George L. Iseman, secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, which is sponsoring the event.

Coincident with his announcement Isemann also declared that he will be at the Coliseum Alleys tonight to receive entries and give information concerning the tournament. Entries may also be left at all local bowling establishments.

Judging from the number of entries submitted so far in the second annual Brother and Sister Tournament, which will be held at the Mt. Ranier Alleys all next week, the affair promises to be the success it was last year, when 26 brothers and sister combinations competed.

Three games will be rolled at any time during the week. The tournament is sponsored by Hugh and Catherine Crawley, brother and sister rollers at the Mt. Ranier Alleys.

INDOOR MEET HERE DRAWS MIDDIES

Navy Granted Permission to Compete in C. U. Games.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 23.—Naval Academy authorities today granted permission for the midshipmen's track team to participate in an indoor meet to be held in Washington, March 7. The Tars will compete against representatives of Catholic University, University of Maryland, Virginia, and Lafayette College, of Easton, Pa.

The Middies runners are now being put through the paces on an outdoor board track under the direction of their coach, E. J. Thompson, former Dartmouth star, and holder of the world's high hurdle record.

Siegfaff Awarded Athletic Prize.

A belated athletic award also was announced today. Midshipman William M. Siegfaff, first class, of Eagle Rock, Calif., has been declared winner of the class of 1928 award. The award goes to the senior classman, who by his spirit and character while a member of the "B Squad" football contingent, did the most to promote football at the Academy during the year.

Under the terms of a deed of trust executed by the class of 1928, the prize consists of a pair of marine binoculars or a watch, in the discretion of the recipient. The presentation will be made during commencement ceremonies of June week.

Siegfaff was honored by his comrades by being elected captain of B squad, commonly known as the shock troops who bear the brunt of the work in priming the varsity eleven for scheduled games.

Prep Juniors Triumph Over Episcopal Five

Georgetown Prep Juniors were extended to the limit to annex their fourth straight triumph at the expense of the Episcopal High School Juniors yesterday afternoon at Garrett Park, by a 26 to 21 score. The game was nip and tuck throughout.

Neurre, Prep center, sank three field goals and one foul to clinch high-scoring honors. Bowers, with two double-deckers and two fouls, led the Virginians.

V. M. I. Cubs Triumph Over Virginia's Frosh

Special to The Washington Post.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 23.—The Virginia Military Institute freshmen took an early lead in their game with the Virginia freshmen this afternoon, and, though the Cavaliers tied the score in the second half, the Cadets rallied to win, 21 to 15. Irvin Smith, Cadet forward, rang up three goals in a row to put V. M. I. in front after five minutes of play, and the Cadets were ahead, 11 to 6, at half time. Kline and Luck brought the Cavaliers up on even terms to start the half, but Sarver's neat floorwork and the shooting of Smith and Stone put the Cadets out in front.

St. John's Five Wins Over Woodward, 30-12

Holding their guests to 3 points in the second half, St. John's cagers experienced little difficulty in handing Woodward a 30-to-12 trouncing yesterday afternoon on the St. John's floor, before 200 persons.

So effective was the St. John's guarding that the Woodwardians were held to five field goals, all coming in the first half. Woodward opened with a rush, outscoring the Johnnies in the first quarter by 1 point. St. John's rallied, however, to take the lead and held the whip hand the rest of the game, leading at the half, 13 to 9.

Freddie Sheele, Johnny forward, collected four field goals and the same number of fouls to capture high-scoring honors. Smith's quartet of double-deckers and two charity tosses also played a prominent part in the St. John's total. Frye and Maniscalco counted all the Woodward points.

Takoma-Silver Spring Leads in County Race

Randolph Clark's field goal from midfloor in the last 50 seconds of play, broke a 12-to-12 tie and enabled Takoma-Silver Spring cagers to nose out the Bethesda-Chevy Chase quintet, 14 to 12, in a bitterly contested game staged yesterday afternoon on the Bethesda floor. The winners assumed undisputed possession of first place in the Montgomery County High School League by virtue of their win.

Both teams played without a substitution. George Bozievich, of Takoma-Silver Spring, tossed five field goals, to sew up high scoring honors, while Lloyd Fitzgerald, his teammate, featured with a brilliant floor game. Tyrell and Guckeyson led the Bethesda play.

In a preliminary attraction, the Silver Spring High School sextet plastered a 35 to 19 defeat on the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Girls' Team.

COLLEY BACK WITH DUKE QUINTET

Special to The Washington Post.

DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 23.—With the return to condition of Nelson Colley, star guard on the Duke freshman team last year, Coach Eddie Cameron, of the Blue Devils, will be equipped with two full teams of about equal strehgth when he takes his boys to Raleigh tomorrow night to defend their State title against State's Wolfpack.

With Colley back in condition, Coach Cameron will have a complete second team which is about on a par with the first. He will use his early-season lineup, which won four consecutive victories before going on the recent Northern trip.

Rogers and Carter, forwards; Croson, center, and Shaw and Robertshaw, guards, will make up Duke's starting five for the game with State. In immediate reserve he will have a second outfit composed of Garber or Horne and Capelli, forwards; Hill, center, and Colley and Cochrane or Coombs, guards.

Colley and Robertshaw were the guards on Duke's freshman team last year that was undefeated in eight games. Colley was slated to start the season at one of the regular guard posts, but a fractured hand kept him out until recently. During the time he was injured Robertshaw replaced him and his play has been so brilliant that Colley is unable to oust him. Shaw, Robertshaw and Colley will probably alternate at the guard posts.

Four of the Duke loopers are high in the scoring lists. Croson and Shaw are the leaders and Rogers and Robertshaw are numbered among the first eight.

Skinker Eagles Meet Crack Baltimore Five

Skinker Eagles will strive for their fifth consecutive triumph over a visiting road quintet when they stack up against the St. Wenceslaus Lyceum outfit, of Baltimore, tomorrow afternoon at the Silver Spring Armory. Action will get under way at 3:30 o'clock, with the Stewart Photographers playing a preliminary game one hour earlier.

The Eagles already have taken the measure of the Detroit Clowns, Olson's Terrible Swedes, the Richmond Rotary and the Connecticut Yankees. Several hundred Baltimore fans are expected to accompany the St. Wenceslaus Club to Washington for the contest.

Overtime Play Brings Victory to Devitt Five

The sharpshooting of Bill Childress brought the Devitt Prep quintet a 27-25 victory over Leonard Hall School yesterday at Eastern High School.

The teams waged a bitter battle throughout, Leonard Hall leading, 14-13, at the half. Just before the regulation game ended, Reddington tied the score for Leonard Hall. Childress won the game with a goal in the overtime session.

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—Miami Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

MIAMI BEACH HANDICAP features the best card so far offered at the Hialeah Park course this afternoon. Nine horses have been entered for the $2,500 added stake at a mile and 70 yards. Prospects are for a fast track.

Of the nine candidates, it appears that the race is among three horses, SON O' BATTLE, PETO and SILVERDALE. The first two mentioned are the top weights, with 118 pounds each, while SILVERDALE gets in with 113. SON O' BATTLE is selected to win. He was beaten the other day by SILVERDALE. McNamee was criticized for his handling of the son of Man o' War in that race. PETO will doubtless be the favorite, with SILVERDALE second choice. SON O' BATTLE'S races in the East last year, especially in Maryland, indicate he can do much better than his last race shows, but that was a fast mile, in 1:38 2-5. The distance is too far for GUN ROYAL. RACCOON may improve. The others are outclassed.

FIRST RACE—DR. PARRISH should repeat in the first race at 6 furlongs. He beat Begorra and Prometheus, in a three-horse race, by three lengths on Wednesday, on a heavy track, and is much the best of this field. OKAY BEE is the contender, although recent form has been bad. LIGHT VIEW is the only chance for upsetting this placing, and the distance appears short. He raced well at Bowie, but his winning races were over a route.

SECOND RACE—Maiden 2-year-old fillies start in the second race. CHOLLA, from the Belair Stud, a well-bred filly, started last Saturday and ran a good race. She was one of the favorites and finished a close-up fourth, Suntica winning. She should come through today. BONNET, a Dis Donc filly, making her first start, is rated highly, and may be the next best of the field. VOLCRY and PLUM RUN are both conceded a chance.

THIRD RACE—The Golden Beach Purse, third race, for 3-year-olds, looks like another battle between G. D. Winter's HALF DAY and C. V. Whitney's GOSLING. So far it is a tie, each having beaten the other, but the last race of HALF DAY was so impressive that he is selected to win. He ran the six furlongs in 1:12 flat, and beat the Whitney horse by three lengths, conceding weight. He should repeat that effort. JAMISON, winner in New York among good 2-year-olds last season, seems to have the others safe.

FOURTH FACE—The fourth race is an allowance purse at six furlongs, with five sprinters engaged. ANGRY, winner in two starts at Miami, should make it three in a row, for this is the easiest of the three. RAPID TRANSIT was a whirlwind at this track a year ago, but did not do so well in the East. He is rated the contender. T. S. JORDAN has a chance, but he may need a race, as he has not started at this track. His western form would give him a good chance in this field.

SIXTH RACE—PRINCE TOKALON appears to be a standout in the sixth. He was beaten by a nose last week by Begorra, due to a bad ride. He was an even money shot, and the winner was twelve to one. That race should be thrown out in any consideration of this contest. ALCMAN, a recent winner, appears to be the contender. He beat Black Imp and Scarlet Brigade by four lengths a week ago, and would be considered more dangerous if he did not take on more weight, carrying 118 pounds in this race. PLAYFELLOW'S DREAM has gone back considerably this winter, but this should hold the others safe.

SEVENTH RACE—CABELLSDALE, a winner in Florida as well as in Maryland, appears best of the twelve platers to go postward in the seventh race. He was third his last out to Upset Lad, but he can do better. CLENNO, fourth to James M. on Thursday, is rated the contender. Earlier races show him to better advantage. INTREPID has been improving and last out was second to James M. and but for his inconsistent way of running, might beat this field. He should be third.

STOCKS' PRICE LEVEL ADVANCES 3 POINTS

2,868,150 SHARES SOLD

New York, Jan. 23 (A. P.)—The stock market was so cheerfully disposed today that it sent up some trial balloons to test the bullishness of the speculative wind.

Willingness of the shorts to cover was the chief contribution to the day's advances, which averaged nearly 3 points. Utilities rose rapidly at the close, outstripping the other groups, but there was substantial strength in the industrials and rails. It was the most active day of the new year, for sales totaled 2,868,150 shares, a million more than yesterday.

Fortified by the conservatively expressed optimism of two men whose opinions Wall street highly respects, operators for the advance saw to it that the bears got no rope. Traders still short of the market, sensing that the recovery, even though technical, meant to go further, became buyers of stock, ready to ride with the rally. Profit taking halted the rise early in the afternoon, halving gains of 1 to 3 points, but the climb was resumed during the later trading and prices finished at the top.

U. S. Steel Gains 1½ Points.

Consolidated Gas, up 4¾, Electric Power & Light, up 3½, and North American, American & Foreign Power and Columbia Gas, with 2-point net advances, were prominent. Public Service of New Jersey, American Telephone, International Telephone and United Corp., showed less aggressiveness, but closed 1 to 1½ higher. That was also the range for U. S. Steel; American Can, Westinghouse, General Electric, Anaconda, National Biscuit, Kennecott, Union Carbide and New York Central.

A financial news agency's announcement that Bethlehem Steel directors would probably declare the regular quarterly dividend next Thursday, although fourth-quarter earnings had been only 15 cents a share and total 1930 income 75 cents less than full annual dividend requirements, caused a rapid withdrawal of the shorts from that issue, which finished 2¾ higher. General Motors was also strong, up a point. Allied Chemical rose 4¾; Norfolk & Western, 5¾, and Motor Products, 7.

The weekly trade reviews reported progress, although warning that the pace was slow. Dun's said retail trade has responded, to some extent, and that the shortage of surplus stocks had forced some manufacturers to put aside spring orders to handle work for immediate shipment.

Bradstreet's Is Encouraged.

Bradstreet's was also encouraged by a pick-up in retail business, which it said was better than wholesale and jobbing distribution. The review added, however, that activity so far was not equal to a year ago, although it pointed out that the reaction of 1930's first quarter was still in mind and that the current disposition was to make progress slowly.

Bonds continued in demand, but the grain markets were reactionary. Wheat eased fractionally in response to easy foreign cables and increasing stocks. Corn lost 1¼ to 1½ in Chicago, reflecting lower Southwest markets. Cotton was irregular, 5 points net higher to 5 lower.

Foreign exchanges firmed. Sterling cables recovered to $4.85½, comfortably above the gold point, and there was a small but general improvement in the continental rates.

Curb Review

New York, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Vigorous professional operations for the advance in a handful of issues carried the curb list still higher today, although profit taking made progress uneven at times.

The turnover expanded sharply, the day's transactions aggregating 798,200 shares, or more than double the volume of the preceding session. It was notable, however, that of more than 350 active issues, more than a third of the day's total trading was concentrated in half a dozen.

United Gas was again turned over in large volume, rising nearly a point to 11⅞, in transactions aggregating 112,000 shares. Electric Bond & Share and American Superpower sold up 1½, and 1 point, respectively, each with a turnover of about half that of United Gas.

Other utilities continued to move forward, notably the Insull group, although trading was in markedly smaller volume than in the Electric Bond & Share group. Middle West, Insull Utility and Corporation Securities gained about a point each. Utilities Power & Light and United Light were also in demand. Niagara Hudson rose fractionally in a large turnover.

A few of the high-priced, lightly-traded specialties advanced sharply. A. O. Smith rose 19 points, Great Atlantic & Pacific, 15, and Aluminum Co. of America, 10. Activity in the industrial and specialty group was light, but Dresser A, Pitney Bowes, Rike Kumler, Waitt & Bond A and Western Air Express were among issues gaining 1 to 3. Ford, Ltd., was again turned over in large volume, but closed up only ⅛.

In the oils, Standard of Ohio gained nearly 3, and Gulf, 2. Cities Service, Colon, Imperial and Vacuum gained fractionally. Mines were dull and Newmont lost a point. In the investment company issues, the Blue Ridge and selected industry shares and United Founders were firm, and National Bond & Share gained 2 points.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

MAN JAILED, FINED; FREED IN ASSAULT

Disorderly Conduct Charges Bring Sentence in Prince Georges.

TWO WOMEN INVOLVED

Although two charges of assault against Charles Ward were dismissed in Prince Georges County Police Court yesterday, he was sentenced to 60 days in jail and a fine of $50 on two charges of disorderly conduct.

Ward was accused of shooting at Margaret Day, of District Heights, with a shotgun, and of beating his mother, Eliza Ward. Both these charges were dismissed by Judge J. Chew Sheriff, but he was also charged with being disorderly in the homes of both women, and was convicted on these counts.

Charges of manufacturing liquor, brought against two youths, were nolle prossed when they pleaded guilty to possession. The boys are Carl Maske, 19, of Capitol Heights, and Erving Sandy, 16, of the same address. Each was fined $50 and committed to jail in default of the fine.

They were arrested several weeks ago by County Policeman V. M. Nichols, who seized a 500-gallon still, about 56 gallons of liquor, and 3,000 gallons of mash. The plant was located between Clinton and the Oxon Hill line.

Convicted on a charge of possession, George Washington, colored, of Accokeek, Md., was fined $100. Washington was arrested when he sent for a policeman to arrest two men who allegedly attempted to hold him up. Police found a quantity of contraband in the man's possession. The two men charged with the hold-up were also tried, but the charges were dismissed.

Six months in the House of Correction was the sentence meted out to Raymond Spriggs when he was convicted of assault and battery on his wife, Louise. He lives in Oxon Hill. William Walker, of Chapel Hill, was fined $10 for assault and battery on Etta Walker. He was committed to jail in default of the fine.

Merrill Gough, of Leonardtown, forfeited $10 on a charge of reckless driving and $25 for speeding at a rate of more than 40 miles an hour. Andrew P. Wade, of Pennsylvania avenue, near Nineteenth street northwest, also chose to forfeit when his case was called. He had left $10 on a reckless driving charge.

Fred D. Hawkins, colored, posted a peace bond of $100 on charges that he threatened F. T. Unkle. Ora Bryan, who lives near Brandywine, was fined $3 for not sending her daughter, Florence, to school. The fine was suspended, however, on condition that she would send the child in the future.

Last year the Prince Georges County rescue squad made 372 runs, but its work resulted in a deficit of $186.93, according to the annual report of Chief Andrew Gasch. Total receipts were $1,693.83, while $1,880.76 was expended on the upkeep of the service.

Nearly two-thirds of the income was from public donations, amounting to $934.83. Volunteer fire companies in the county donated $551. The rest was received as follows: Paid by the commissioners for runs made for the county, $155; membership fees, $28, and benefit dance, $25.

The greater part of the money paid out went for repairs, gas and oil for the ambulances, a total expenditure of $1,419.06. The company also bought an inhalator, which cost $150, and oxygen renewal cost $79.68. First aid supplies cost $42.52, and printing added another $13.

General expenses, which included covering schools, white uniforms for eight men, and other incidentals, took $151 of the sum, and laundering sheets, blankets and pillow cases cost $22.50 more.

Injured or sick persons were moved in 276 of the 372 runs. In 96 cases those injured were taken to hospitals in passing cars, before ambulances arrived.

The increased county aid bill which will be introduced during the present legislative session, under present plans, would give each ambulance of the squad $500 a year. Such a county contribution would easily have paid expenses of the squad for the year. As it is, the deficit must be carried by the squad members, until public donations make it up.

The judge of the Orphan's Court of the county has named Gershon P. Bickford, of Berwyn, the woman's husband, as administrator of the estate of Mrs. Lula A. Bickford. Mrs. Bickford was Republican candidate for judge of this court, during the recent election. Bond for Mr. Bickford was set at $3,000.

After posting bond of $200, Hamilton Hall was made administrator of the estate of Mary E. Sheckells. Other appointments by the court were Marie C. Gorely, executrix of the estate of Matilda Wilhelm; J. Wilson Ryon, administrator of the estate of Edward Jackson, and Margaret Brown, administrator of the estate of Ruth Harper.

Although several counties and Baltimore city have expressed their approval of the proposal that voting machines be used in future elections, residents of Prince Georges County do not seem to favor the idea. The interest and sinking fund necessary to install the machines would cost more than the present system of judges, clerks and tellers, it is held.

Also, while elections are expensive—the last one costing the county about $20,000—the money paid to the various clerical workers remains in the county, it has been pointed out. If machines were installed, it is held, this money would go out of the State, although some judges and clerks would still be required.

The greatest advantage of the machine, it has been pointed out, is that results of elections would be available immediately after the polls closed, whereas at present it takes from 4 to 24 hours to count the votes in various precincts. During the last election, returns from the three largest precincts did not come in until the evening of the day after election day, and these returns upset the advantage which the Republicans held and gave the victory to the Democrats.

Another advantage of the machines would be that they would eliminate errors in balloting, but it seems to be the consensus of opinion that funds available are more seriously needed for other purposes.

Through Attorney Clarence M. Roberts, Robert F. Simms has filed suit for $10,000 against the Washington-Marlboro-Annapolis Motor Lines, Inc. No petition was filed with the suit.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23—George B. Spears, 45, one of four men arrested yesterday in connection with the $100,000 plot to kidnap a child of Horace S. Danville, Va., Jan. 23.—Harrison R. Fitzgerald remains at the wheel of control of policies of the Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills, being reelected president by the board of directors and no change being made in the roster of officials. James I. Pritchett is vice president; George P. Ray, vice president and sales manager; Robert R. West, vice president and production manager, and W. W. Ayres, secretary. Their salaries remain unchanged.

Union reaction to the attack on the strike contained in Fitzgerald's report to the shareholders yesterday and the unity with which the company embarks on a new year, was one of resentment. A formal statement is expected on Sunday, but in the meantime Rufus Moseley, speaking for the union, reiterated resentment that lawlessness should have been charged to the union. "We do not propose to lie quiet under the charges put on us by Fitzgerald. They are not true," he said.

Expected Troops Retention.

Retention of the troops, Moseley said, "is no more than we expected. It is strange they should be kept on the job if everything is going along as swimmingly as the management says it is."

Publication of the number of workers in the mills, based on a check-up of the pay roll books made, with Fitzgerald's permission, by a reporter, drew this reply from the union spokesman: "If the company is satisfied, we are." The number is 3,457. The union had claimed 2,000.

Four units of the 246th Virginia Regiment, Coast Artillery, were here tonight and the troops they replace, 250 members of the 116th Infantry, will have left here before daylight. Col. Alonzo E. Wood, here since Wednesday and in command of the artillerymen, whose equipment is similar to that of the infantrymen, assumed control late tonight. Maj. Reese Gruber handing over to him the strike duty command. The infantrymen, during their 60 days of duty, lost one man, Lieut. F. H. Johnson, of Bedford, killed by a street car.

Alleged Dynamiter Freed.

Louis Yeatts, one of the four men indicted for dynamiting the home of Henry Swann, a Negro worker, was set free in the Pittsylvania Circuit Court today at Chatham. Swann testified he was hiding in a ditch expecting an attack and recognized Yeatts, "whom I have known all my life." He said that Yeatts and the three others were frightened away at 11:30, returned at 4:30 and that he saw the fuse lighted and the dynamite hurled. Yeatts, supported by many witnesses, said he was elsewhere. The three other cases may be nolle prossed.

Further complaints of the stopping of motorists at the State line, near Schoolfield, and the hurling of stones were received by Chief of Police Martin, who referred complainants to the county police.

Shippers' Parley May Open Sunday

Delayed Arrivals Hold Up Intercoastal Event at Virginia Beach.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—Because all the delegates representing steamship lines allied with the United States Intercostal Conference had not arrived, the opening session of the conference, scheduled to be held at Virgina Beach this morning, did not take place.

Robert C. Thackara, chairman of the body, who arrived at Virginia Beach yesterday, stated tonight that he was not sure when the opening session would be held, but he hoped it would not be later than Sunday.

Among matters to be taken up is the recent demand of railroads for legislation which would enable them to operate ships in the intercoastal, Great Lakes and other trades.

VIRGINIA FARMERS FARE WELL AT SHOW

Several Carry Off Honors at Grain Exposition in Harrisonburg.

PRIZE WINNERS GIVEN

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 23.—That Virginia farmers who use high-quality seeds did not suffer so severely as expected as a result of the drought of 1930 was shown by 600 exhibits at the tenth annual State corn and grain show, which closed a two-day exposition here today in connection with the convention of the Virginia Crop Improvement Association.

There were especially fine exhibits of seed corn, seed wheat and sweet and white potatoes, as also displays of oats, rye, barley, soybeans, cowpeas, peanuts and seed cotton. The wheat entries numbering 81 were the largest in the history of the show.

John S. Ward, Leesburg, again was crowned champion seed corn producer of Virginia, his ten-ear specimen winning the sweepstakes trophy the third successive year. There were 280 specimens on exhibition.

W. F. Abernathy and his children, of McKenney, again carried off the greatest number of prizes, winning four firsts in corn.

Intrastate seed corn honors went to Illinois and Indiana. There were 30 entries from five States, the number being decreased because of the drought. New York, Maine and Maryland carried off seed potato classes. The remainder of the exhibits were confined to Virginia producers, all sections of the Old Dominion being represented.

ECONOMIST URGES NEW COUNTY RULE

PARLEY AT COLLEGE PARK

Special to The Washington Post.

College Park, Md., Jan. 23.—County governments were set up in days of ox carts and are built on principles no longer alive in this country, Dr. Charles J. Galpin, economist in charge of farm population and rural life, U. S. Department of Agriculture, told Maryland county and home demonstration agents today at their annual conference at the University of Maryland. He gave it as his opinion that this maladjustment would be among the last to be corrected, because present county units and the system of county government are firmly entrenched in politics. He reviewed attempts made in various States to remedy the situation, particularly North Carolina, Virginia and New York, and emphasized the necessity for efforts along this line as one of the most effective means of solving the problem of increasing tax rates.

Predicts Larger Units.

Dr. Galpin referred to the consolidation of schools as an example of the combining of small units into larger units for efficiency and economy, and complimented Maryland on the progress made.

He said, however, the consolidated schools were too small, and predicted that eventually they would be joined into larger units. Principles of business have been so modernized, he said, that one person can take care of as much business as six formerly did, and local governments should be organized to take advantage of the more efficient methods now employed by business.

Too much standardization in education was condemned by John D. Willard, research associate, American Association for Adult Education, New York, who classed the conference method, wherein there is opportunity for exchange of ideas, as the best. Lectures are valuable, he said, for conveying individual experiences and arousing interest, but are not effective in imparting knowledge. Most of what one gets in school is gone by the time one has been out of school five years, Mr. Willard said. He pleaded for means whereby education of the schools could be continued, which, he emphasized, would not necessitate setting up a lot of new machinery.

Finds Radio Valuable.

R. M. Watkins, instructor in public speaking at the University of Maryland, said great possibilities were offered through the medium of radio for the dissemination of farm information.

Dr. Jesse W. Sprowls, associate professor of education, and Prof. Louis Goodyear, instructor in music at the University of Maryland, also spoke.

Dr. Frank B. Bomberger, chief of the Maryland Department of Markets, who is in charge of the division of organization, of the Federal Farm Board, explained the program and accomplishments of that board. He said the board maintains an absolutely artificial price for grain at the present time, which is 20 cents or more above the price at Liverpool and Winnipeg. Dr. Bomberger asked if the board should not be loved for the enemies it has made. He emphasized that its stabilizations are emergency measures to meet unusual conditions.

Man Burned in Gasoline Fire.

Burns to the face, hands, and arms were received by Hyman Blum, 30 years old, Warder street near Irving street northwest, while he was extinguishing a gasoline fire in a dry-cleaning establishment, B street near First street southeast, where he is employed. He was treated at Casualty Hospital and later went to his home.

ARLINGTON PLANS FOR BICENTENNIAL

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 309. Clarendon, Va.

Henry C. Morris, president of the Alexandria Arlington and Fairfax Real Estate Board, returned yesterday from Richmond, where he, with Guy N. Church, former president of the State Real Estate Board, and John R. Graham, of Alexandria, became enthusiastic over state-wide plans for the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. The three had discussed the subject with the State Real Estate Board's Executive Committee.

"There is nothing more important to Virginia than to see to it that its entrance to the South from the Nation's capital is cleaned up and that the State in general puts its best foot forward to greet the hundreds of thousands who will visit Virginia during the celebration in 1932," said Mr. Morris.

As president of the local organization, he said he soon would call a special committee together to plan for the "cleaning up" of this section.

To carry the program over the entire State, Mr. Morris said plans had been made to have the Bicentennial Commission send to every real estate operator a folder giving detailed information on the commission's aim to make the celebration the greatest the country has seen.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Arlington-Fairfax Railway will be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the officers of the treasurer, Charles T. Jesse, opposite the Arlington County Courthouse. Officers will be elected.

Announcement was made that the employes of the Peoples Life Insurance Co. of Washington, operating in Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties, are giving one day's salary to aid the poor and unemployed.

A check for $25.42 was turned over to Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare for Arlington County, and similar amounts to Mrs. Louise Manghum, superintendent of public welfare for Fairfax County, and to Alexandria City officials.

The executive committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation meeting last night at the Lyon Village home of the chairman, Robert N. Anderson, voted to give an annual dinner. The committee on arrangements will be composed of the executive committee and the following: Hugh J. McGrath, Robert E. Plymale, Commander P. T. Wright, L. C. McNemar, Joseph Haley, Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs and Miss Gertrude L. Crocker. The committee will meet Friday night in the rooms of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce to name a general chairman.

The following committee chairmen were appointed: Walter U. Varney, membership; Mrs. Eleanor Gary, schools; G. O. Basham, transportation and communication.

From a letter received from the State Highway Commission yesterday by Robert H. Forman, zoning administrator for Arlington County, indications are that work on the Lee boulevard will be started the early part of March.

Mr. Forman said this is the first definite information on the State Highway Department's plans for the project, other than that the work would be done.

The letter said there are still two condemnation cases pending and it is expected these will be sufficiently cleared up in the next two weeks and that arrangements to start the work can be made.

The State has allocated $200,000 for the project, but the work has not been started because of difficulty in obtaining rights of way. It is believed the funds to complete the project will be made available by the time they are needed.

The work of obtaining rights of way has been going on for the last four years. It has been done largely by the National Boulevard Association, of which Dr. Samuel M. Johnson is president. He has been assisted greatly by William S. Hoge, jr.

Morning and evening services at the Cherrydale Baptist Church tomorrow will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. M. R. Japhet. At the morning service his subject will be, "As in the Days of Noah." In the evening he will preach on "Revelation Two and Three."

Services tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in St. George's Episcopal Church will be conducted by the rector, the Rev. Henry J. Miller. In the evening at 8 o'clock the adult discussion club will meet in the rectory.

The Thrifton Village Improvement League will hold its monthly meeting Monday night in the parish hall of Grace Episcopal Church at 8 o'clock.

President H. C. Roberts asks that all residents of the community attend. The question of the gas rates for the county, selection of candidates for county officers to be elected next fall, bill boards and plans for beautifying the community, will be discussed.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

STUDY OF A STRANGE PSYCHOPATHIC CASE.

HE was standing on his head in a dark corner of the room and uttering curious sounds.

"Go away!" he shouted as his family approached, quite shaken by his behavior. "I know I'm standing on my head. • • • You'd be surprised how good it feels. • • • Now don't bother me. • • • I'm working on a system for standing on my feet and head at the same time. • • • Don't tell me it can't be done. • • • Look! • • • I'm doing it!"

• • • •

"Quiet now while I show you another good trick."

"What is it?" asked a startled relative.

"I can run east while facing dead west. Would you like to see me do it?"

"No."

"Good! I'll do it for you. • • • It isn't hard at all after you've had practice. • • • I've been practicing two years. • • • On a committee of big public men • • • leaders of public thought, you know. • • • Best place in the world to practice running one way while facing another. • • • Got to be sure they're really leaders, though."

• • • •

HERE the poor fellow stumbled and fell through the glass doors of a bookcase. He laughed weirdly.

"You think I fell, don't you?" he cried. "You're crazy. • • • It's an optical illusion. • • • Nothing's happened to me. • • • I'm still running west while facing east."

"Running east while facing west," he was corrected. "That was the demonstration."

"Nothing of the sort. • • • You misunderstood me. • • • But that's what I like about it. • • • I want to be misunderstood. • • • In fact, I insist on it. • • • I got that way through conferences. • • • I'm a conference addict. • • • Do you know what a conference addict is? • • • The country's full of 'em. • • • Really pathetic. • • • You have to learn how to sleep with your eyes open. • • • It's a great strain. • • • I lost 100 pounds attending conferences and mastering the art of sleeping while keeping my face attentive. • • • I have great control of my facial muscles. • • • Want to see me register approval, condemnation and neutrality all at one time?"

"I'm not keen about it," said an older son.

"It's no trouble at all. • • • Look! • • • That's what I call my for and against face. • • • I've been 22 months working on it. • • • Get the idea? • • • I can think both ways on any given question and still be fooling. • • • Ask me what I think of some great issue? • • • By shaking my head sideways and nodding it up and down at the same time I can keep you completely in the dark."

• • • •

Here he jumped through a window backward and leaped into a passing taxicab. "Drive straight ahead at full speed," he commanded the driver, "keeping the gears in reverse!"

• • • •

Relatives, friends and neighbors stopped the cab, dragged the wild man out and sent for a doctor. The doctor studied the patient, heard the accounts of his behavior and gave his diagnosis at once.

"He's just been reading the Wickersham report," he said. "Rest and quiet is what he needs. He'll be all right again in five or six months."

RKO is said to have wired the Liquorsham Committee an offer for a week at the Palace in an all-star contortionist act.

Jake the Bootlegger says the commission's prohibition report seemed to him as if it had been tampered with in shipment.

Well, the report proved that there is really no limit to the number of words that can be used as substitutes for the simple statement "Yes" and "No."

"It's not dry and it's not wet," says Ima Dodo of the Wickersham report. "It's just vague, like drug-store gin."

HOW TO COMPREHEND THE WICKERSHAM REPORT.

Take report in left hand and cut into paper dolls, roll the remnants into form of Mexican jumping beans, work out a cross-word puzzle containing four three-letter words for confusion of thought, multiply the result by the difference between the cubic yards of rock dislodged from Niagara Falls and the compound interest on the Einstein theory for five years at 6 per cent, and lay in a cool, dry place.

ROCK CREEK DRIVE PLAN PROGRESSING

CAPITAL CHEST OPPOSED

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
9103 Conn. ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.
Telephone Wisconsin 4200

Bids for grading the right of way for the proposed park drive along Rock Creek from the District of Columbia line to the East-West highway probably will be advertised for within a month, according to Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The planning commission has practically completed negotiations for the strip of land necessary, and deeds are expected to be recorded within a short time. The owners of the land have agreed to dedicate it to the county for the park drive.

Mr. Root said that it is necessary to speed up the beginning of construction of the road in order that the District officials and Congress will be assured of the good faith of the county and construct the strip which will connect the Maryland road with the District system of park highways. It is probable that the surfacing of the road will be delayed until spring, State law prohibiting the pouring of concrete after November 15.

Later the road will be continued by way of Jones Mill road about a mile through the property of B. H. Warner, jr., and about 600 feet through the property of Col. Morris K. Berroll to Connecticut avenue.

The park and planning commission has formally accepted the park drive connecting Blair road in Silver Spring with Maple avenue in Takoma Park although the road is not quite finished. It has been opened to traffic but guard rails on the side have not been completed.
